

Crew of Coast Guard Survives

After Night of Terrible Exposure in Seeking to Rescue Two Men On Wrecked Lumber Schooner Party Returns
HANDS AND FEET ARE BADLY FROZEN
Hope for Men Had Been Given Up After Night Search for Missing Crew Had Failed To Ascertain Their Safety

SAY MURDER SQUAD CRUCIFIED DANIEL AND TOM RICHARDS

Court House, Bastrop, La., Jan. 13.—After a night of terrible hardship and fighting Captain Walter E. Sprague and five men of the U. S. Coast Guard returned today from the wrecked lumber schooner Ralph W. They had been missing since they put out in power boat to the rescue of two men on the wrecked lumber schooner Ralph W. Captain Sprague and his men, after making an eleven mile run from the Isle of Shoals station were forced to give up. Their boat had become so laden with ice that she was unable to make any progress. They put in at a small cove on Smuttys Island, one of the Isle of Shoals group, temporarily. Throughout the night hundreds of miles of shoals people, including relatives of the missing men, patrolled the shore and kept beacons burning. Hope of ever seeing the men alive again had almost been given up when they reappeared today. All are under medical care.

Will R. Norsworthy, Morehouse parish planter, testifying, credited Captain J. K. Shipwith, leader of the parish organization of Ku Klux Klan, with having said Richard and Daniel "knew too much."

Norsworthy was testifying as to a conference he said was held with Shipwith in the latter's home at Vaughan, La. The discussion led up to the disappearance of Daniel and Richard. "He made the remark that all of this trouble had occurred from two very sorry characters," Norsworthy testified, "and said 'if the boys hadn't been so smart we intended to give them a trial in the courts for shooting at Dr. McKoin,' but he said 'they got so smart and had too much to say at the ball game and there at Jim Norsworthy's barbecue' that he said 'the boys—he didn't say 'we' that time—he said 'the boys decided they knew too much.'"

The testimony of Norsworthy, with statements of Robert L. Dade, mayor of Mer Rouge, and Kelly Harp, that black masks were used by a Klan band on a march to the village of Stamper last summer, and the testimony of Joseph Davenport, Mer Rouge merchant, were high lights of the proceedings.

Mayor Dade said he wore a black mask furnished him by Edward Ivy, a fellow klansman, when he was picked up in Mer Rouge and asked to accompany the band on a trip to Stamper to investigate a report that a negro was operating a gambling house there, where both white men and negroes gambled. Dade said Dr. McKoin also was a member of the raiding party. McKoin, Dade said, was garbed in white. Harp declared he also wore a black mask on the raid.

Davenport testified as follows: "My family has resided in the Mer Rouge district of Morehouse dating back 117 years. It lived in peace until the advent of the Klan. We then had to get permission from high officials of the Klan to continue our residence in our old home town."

WASHINGTON DOWNS XENIA THREE POINTS IN FAST CONTEST

Only three points separated Xenia Central High basketball team and the Washington High five at the Washington C. H. Y. M. C. A. Friday night, but that three-point edge was the sole property and possession of Coach "Weiner" Vannorsdall's aggregation of tossers. The score was 21 to 18.

Brought pretty much to life by their miserable showing against Columbus East last week, and a stiff week's drilling insisted upon by Coach Earl Burgher, the blue and white tossers showed marked improvement in their play and basket shooting. Washington like Xenia was hard hit by graduation, Baker, at guard, being the only player left from last season's five, but the Fayette County tribe had the advantage of the services of Bob Gegner, star player with Xenia last season, who is now with the Washington team, performing at center.

The three point lead that Washington held when the game ended, represented the advantage that Vannorsdall's athletes held over Captain Currie and his mates most of the game. The first half ended with Washington holding a similar lead, the score being 12 to 13, and they kept this much out in front most of the pastime. Xenia fans were pleased to see the forwards connecting with the net more consistently. LeSourd was chief point collector for Burgher's charges with four field goals and two fouls. Gegner played well against his former team-mates, annexing three fielders and three fouls for his team, while Baker at guard and Brownwell at forward each got three shots from the floor. The lineup and summary:

Xenia (18) Washington (21)
Woolary L. F. Bronwell
LeSourd R. F. Schwan
Schwab C. Gegner
D. Currie (C) L. G. Baker
Zell R. G. Clark

Substitutions: Washington—Rodecker for Sheridan. Field Goals: Woolary 3, LeSourd 4, Schwab 1, Bronwell 3, Gegner 3, Baker 3. Fouls: LeSourd 2 out of 4, Gegner 3 out of 5, Sheridan 0 out of 1. Referee: Rulmond, Ohio State.

CAN'T ALWAYS TELL WHETHER DANCE IS TO GO ON OR NOT

New York, Jan. 13.—You can't always tell whether you are going to see a show or not when a temperamental classical dancer is billed to perform. Brooklyn theatergoers concluded recently when Isadora Duncan engaged in a clash of dispositions with her accompanist and suddenly ended the performance.

Miss Duncan and the accompanist, Max Rabinowitz, had just finished what the dancer called "a radio to Bernhardt." Before the dance she had announced that "Sarah Bernhardt is dying in Paris. I will dance her funeral march."

The plaudits of the crowd echoed loudly through the theater at the conclusion of the number. Miss Duncan took three bows and the pianist took two. Then Miss Duncan said something under her breath to Rabinowitz. He rose abruptly, left the stage and did not return.

The dancer did the next turn without the accompanist—in fact without music.

Immediately after she left the stage also and failed to show up again.

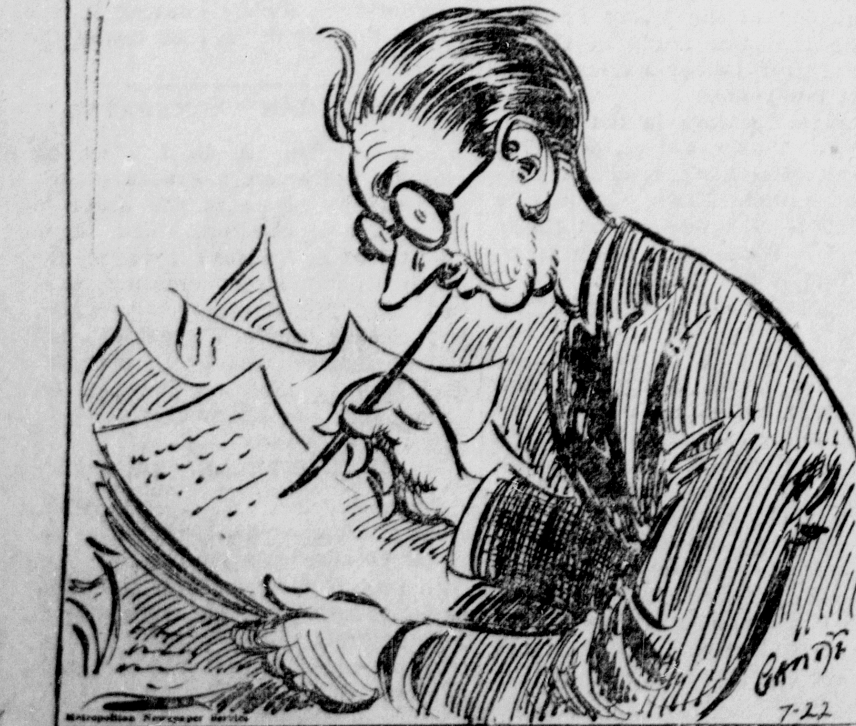

The audience wondered what it was all about, while the distracted husband of Isadora rushed through the aisles and back of the scenes searching vainly for his wife. As the last spectator filed out Miss Duncan's husband was still looking.

TICKLISH SEASON FOR ALL MUNICIPAL FLORIDA JUDGES ON

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 13.—Begins now the "Ticklish Season" for municipal judges throughout the length and breadth of Florida.

For the next four months these judges will have before them many hundreds of tourists from all sections with violating traffic ordinances of the cities of the state. These tourists, more than likely, will be guests of the city in whose court they are ordered to appear.

It is the business of the judge hearing these cases to see that his decision makes an impression on the violator and yet sends him out of the court room with a smile on his face.

Winter visitors in Florida who drive automobiles are unfamiliar with local ordinances governing operation of cars. At times it is their lot to be accosted by a traffic officer before they are enlightened on the rules, and as a result it becomes the duty of the police to explain and, if necessary, to administer a fine. To say "Five dollars and costs" to a Winter visitor and yet have the offender leave the judge in good spirits comes under the general heading of the finer arts, or diplomacy.

Many of the cities have devised a guest card, which is given out by the traffic men when automobiles with northern license plates are tagged. One side of the card usually invites the guests to register at the Chamber of Commerce, and furnishes introduction to the municipal judge from both the mayor and the secretary of the motor club.

The other is a brief summary of the traffic ordinances signed by the mayor. If a Winter visitor's automobile is tagged by an officer who places one of the guest cards in the car its owner will lose nothing by appearing as requested on the tag.

RUSSIAN ART AND LITERATURE NOW IN UNCERTAIN STATE

Paris, Jan. 13.—"Russian art and literature are at the cross roads. Nobody knows which direction they are going to take." This is the opinion of Olga Chekhova, widow of Anton Chekhov, the Russian playwright.

"Naturally the revolution has released many art and literary tendencies, the existence of which were scarcely suspected a few years ago.

It was behind the scenes of the Champs Elysees Theater that I met Madame Chekhova, during the performance of Gorki's play, "The Depths." I asked this actress, as famous in Russia as her husband is known to the rest of the world, what is the secret of the Russian theater's talented cast. Although they understood not a word of the language, dozens of American tourists in the audience, between the acts were proclaiming this performance of a Russian play the most realistically acted piece the yhad ever seen.

"Most actors play outward," Madame Chekhova explained. "Most actors play to a greater or lesser extent to the audience. We play to each other. The audience doesn't exist for us. There is no difference or distinction between a rehearsal and a public performance. We study our roles, the characters, and study them for months before we start on the play. We study the psychology of the character we are to play until we can live the part until we know what the person would do in any situation that might arise—until we could live that character off the stage as well as on it."

I looked at Madame Chekhova's tattered red skirt, which she wears in "The Depths." "Isn't it dangerous to live a part to that extent?" I asked.

"How many times have you played in this role you have tonight?" she replied.

"Perhaps four hundred," she replied.

"Living a part so thoroughly and so often, aren't you afraid you'll be affected by it, become sort of tattered and torn mentally and spiritually?" I asked.

Madame Chekhova's pleasant eyes twinkled. "It's art, you must remember," she replied. "I don't believe it would affect an artist. But, you see, a theater conducted on our plan cannot produce every play. The 'factory output,' as I like to describe the plays turned out in a hurry for some particular actress or stage, would almost never be suitable for the intensive work we put into a production.

"We must have works reflect real, vivid, throbbing life. Most plays written for a star cannot be said to fill this demand. The facts and truths of life are subordinated to the needs of the star or of the theater. That is why authors who create works which will live never think of particular actors while they are writing.

"But world believes that your husband wrote 'The Cherry Orchard' for you," I objected.

"He didn't even know what role I would play when he wrote 'The Cherry Orchard,'" Chekhova replied.

"It's a thoroughly entrenched tradition," I said.

Madame Chekhova blushed a trifle behind her rosy make-up. She shrugged her shoulders. Evidently she doesn't dislike the tradition, even if it does conflict with her theories of the best method of writing plays which are literature.

"Perhaps," she smiled.

"Have you noticed that we carry with us actual art treasures, antiques which thrill the Paris connoisseurs?" Madame Chekhova continued. "Every property used on the stage must have a significance to the actor. They must become treasured possessions, old friends, so that the actor will feel toward them as he would to his possessions off the stage." Madame Chekhova's call for the third act came, and she left her dressing room.

"Yes, she's right; but this realism in properties can go too far," grumbled one of the stage managers, as he directed me backed to the front of the theater.

"Let me show you something. I'll show you realism for a traveling company. It's what you Americans call the 'takes the I used to live in New York, you know—takes the biscuit. There's realism. We've lugged those all the way from Moscow and must cart them back again."

He pointed to ten full-sized church bells mounted in a portable belfry.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

PLANET VENUS IS LOST THEN FOUND

New York, Jan. 13.—Venus, (the planet, not the Goddess,) disappeared early today, but before the aerial reserves could be called out, she was found by astronomers hiding behind the moon.

To the naked eye the big star looked like a button sewed on the rim of the crescent moon.

No one got excited over the occurrence but a few astronomers who knew in advance what was going to happen.

Officially it was known as the occultation of Venus.

NO MORE FREE SEEDS

Washington, Jan. 13.—Free distribution of government seed was definitely killed by action of the senate. JOHNSON MEASURE WOULD DELAY RAIL ROAD DIVIDENDS

Washington, Jan. 11.—Sen. Hiram Johnson, of California, has introduced a bill in Congress that is destined to cause a lot of commotion in railway financial circles once Congress gets around to considering it.

Senator Johnson's bill provides, in short, that no railroad in the United States shall be permitted to declare a dividend until it has first obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission a certificate to the effect that its equipment and service is sufficient for the needs of the people served by the road.

It is one of the most far-reaching bits of railway legislation ever proposed, for properly enforced, it would bring all railway dividends under partial control of the Government. The Government could say when and under what conditions railroads would be permitted to proclaim dividends to thousands of shareholders.

The bill is the direct outgrowth of the railway shippers' strike of last Summer, which brought the whole railway system of the country to the brink of collapse. The effects of that strike are still apparent on the rails of the country in the shape of broken-down equipment, bad-order cars and incapacitated locomotives. There are no men to make repairs, consequently no repairs, and the condition of rolling stock went steadily downward.

Then came the great seasonal movement of crops, coal and other commodities, Embargoes prevailed on some roads for months; coal began to move in great volume to a country menaced by fuel famine, with Winter coming on; farmers in the West began sending their crops to seaboard and to the industrial East; shippers long denied cars began flooding the terminals with goods for shipment. All this added to the impaired condition of equipment on many roads, due to the strike, combined to create a condition of rolling stock that the country will be years in overcoming.

Shippers have complained of being unable to get cars; farmers and fruit producers of the West have seen their crops rot on the ground because of lack of facilities to move them to market.

"The grape growers of California alone suffered losses of millions of dollars because of lack of shipping facilities," said Senator Johnson, in supporting his bill. "And still railroads go on paying dividends to shareholders that should be spent in replacing worn-out equipment and adding new equipment to meet the legitimate demands of the public."

"It is intolerable that railroads should go on paying huge dividends while the producers of the West are forced to see their crops rot and their stock die because of shortage of cars."

Senator Johnson's bill is the first of the many amendments to the Esch-Cummins Transportation act of 1920 that will be proposed in Congress as a result of the 1922 strike.

There exists little possibility that any of these legislative remedies can be acted upon until next year because of the short life remaining to the sixty-seventh Congress and the uncertainty as to when the sixty-eighth Congress will be called into session.

The bill further provides that the railroads would ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to O. K. a dividend, whereupon the commission would give 30 days' notice to the public and give shippers plenty of time to frame objections. Then a hearing would be held, if necessary, and a decision rendered in much the same manner that the commission now decides rate increases and decreases.

The bill concludes with a penalty clause providing: Any person in anywise co-operating knowingly in the declaration of any dividend without such certificate (from the Interstate Commerce Commission), or in the payment of any dividend so unlawfully declared, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than $5,000 nor more than $25,000, or by imprisonment for not less than two years nor more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the Court."

REVISION OF TRAIN SCHEDULES AFFECTING XENIA ANNOUNCED

The most revolutionary revision of train schedules ever put in effect here by the Pennsylvania Railroad System becomes effective Sunday when four trains will be discontinued from stopping here and nine time changes will be made in the present schedule.

East bound accommodation, No. 234 which leaves Xenia at 5:50 o'clock in the evening, has been discontinued and eliminated from the schedule. Three through trains that have been stopping here will cease to stop after Sunday. They are train No. 143, west bound for St. Louis, which has been leaving Xenia at 10:25 o'clock at night, and two east bound trains from St. Louis, one No. 26, which has been arriving at 11:15 at night, and No. 6, which is due in here at 11:15 o'clock in the morning.

The changes in the time of the arrival and departures of other trains, has been to the effect of delaying these trains so that they operate from ten minutes to an hour and one-half later than the present schedule. The most radical changes are of the accommodation to Cincinnati at 8:25 a. m. which has been postponed to 9:42 o'clock in the morning and the accommodation to Columbus, which has been leaving at 8:27 a. m. and will after Sunday, depart at 9:35 o'clock.

Other changes follow: The 3:28 afternoon train for Columbus has been changed to 3:33 o'clock; the 3:25 train for Dayton, will leave at 3:35; the 7:50 train in the morning from Dayton will arrive at 8:10 o'clock and the morning train for Springfield at 8:10 o'clock has been postponed to 8:20 o'clock. FAST HIGH TEAMS DIVIDE TWIN BILL

East High boys and girls basketball teams divided two games with Springfield teams in a double header staged at the East High gym Friday night, the boys' team winning from the Springfield Nationals 26 to 16, while the girls lost to the Springfield sextette 12 to 9.

The East High lads romped into the lead early in the beginning of the pastime and kept this lead throughout the game. The locals were leading with a score of 18 to 9 at the end of the first half. The second period was more closely played, the teams playing evenly.

J. Taylor was leading point collector for the locals with five field goals and four from the free line, while C. Taylor annexed three shots from the floor, Warren was the best bet for the visitors with two field goals and four fouls. The lineup and summary:

UNION COMMUNITY CLUB ORGANIZES FOR YEAR

Officers for the coming year were elected at a meeting of the Community Club held Friday evening at the Union school house. Mrs. Homer Mansfield was re-elected president, Mrs. Orville Watkins was chosen vice president, Mrs. R. C. Ledbetter, secretary and Fred Wheeler as treasurer.

A program of readings and dialogues was given by the pupils and Miss Reva Spahr, of New Jasper, and Prof. Ferguson, county teacher of music, added greatly to the pleasure of the evening's program with readings and musical numbers. Following the program a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

changes was received here several days ago, the revised schedule was not received until Saturday morning.

The discontinuance of many trains over the division affecting other cities besides Xenia, is also being put in effect, it is said. The elimination of local trains, is due to the competition of electric traction and motor bus service, officials announce, increased transportation facilities provided by this means and by the general use of private automobiles, hurting the steam passenger service, seriously it is said.

In connection with the change, Benjamin McKeen, vice president of the southwestern region of the Pennsylvania System, has issued a statement explaining the position of the railroad with regards to the change. He says in part:

"What we are endeavoring to do is to reconstruct our purely local service upon a scale more nearly in accord with the real needs of the public, as evidenced by the actual volume of travel on these trains, by eliminating those local trains on which patronage has fallen so low as no longer to warrant their continuance. Local passenger train service in the Southwestern Region of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, is at present only being maintained at a very heavy and rapidly increasing loss. We have no expectation that the changes which are to be made will render this local service profitable or even self-sustaining. We are only endeavoring to mitigate the loss where that can be accomplished with due regard to public convenience."

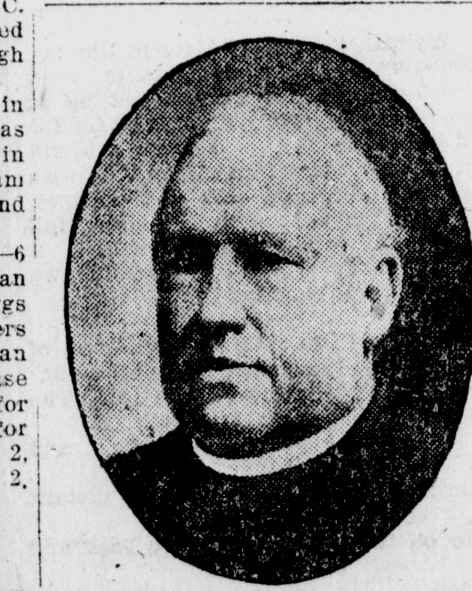

"It seems to me very important that the people in our territory should understand the nature of certain very far-reaching developments which are taking place, since they are certain to effect profoundly our system of transportation and everything dependent upon it. I have reference to the extreme competition which now exists for the shorter and moderate distance travel formerly cared for almost entirely by local steam trains and the enormous multiplication of facilities for performing such service."

"Formerly local passenger trains were well patronized. Many were self-sustaining and some were profitable. It was under those conditions that the Central West was covered with the network of steam railroad lines which now exist. About 25 years ago the development of electric interurban traction lines started and this was pushed with great rapidity, until before a decade had passed, the electric service paralleled the majority of the steam lines in our territory, particularly in Central and Southern Indiana and Ohio."

"Now still another form of competition has risen, which, in the last few years, has grown with such amazing rapidity that few people probably have any adequate realization of its true extent. It is taking business in large volume from both of the old rivals—the local steam train and the electric lines. I refer, of course, to the immense travel in motor vehicles which is following the extremely rapid extension of our hardsurfaced and other improved highways which are paralleling both the steam railroads and the electric systems."

"Generally speaking, on the Southwestern Lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, the direct out-of-pocket cost of operating local passenger train service has risen to be about double the receipts. This means that it costs us a direct outlay of $2 cash to get $1 of gross revenue, and this out-of-pocket cost includes only such items as are a direct charge against the operation of trains such as wages of crews, maintenance of cars and locomotives, expenditures for fuel and train supplies, and makes no allowance for outlays for maintenance of tracks, buildings and terminals, nor does it include salaries of agents and operators or amounts paid for taxes, insurance, interest on bonds and other overhead expenses."

"During the past year, in connection with continued highway development and bus line extensions, the earnings of a number of our local trains have decreased heavily, in some cases as much as 40 per cent to 50 per cent; for instance on two of our lines running out of Terre Haute, Ind., the sale of local tickets has fallen over 45 per cent since the establishment of competitive motor bus routes. As the travel on the through trains remains at about the same level as a year ago, it is evident that the decreased patronage of locals directly reflects the growing motor traffic."

SELLS FURNITURE OF FRIEND; SKIPS

Columbus, Jan. 13.—Wife was away visiting. J. L. Eubanks, the husband, met Emory Lloyd, from his old home town, Richmond, Ind., and invited him to the Eubanks' home. Next morning, Eubanks went to work, leaving Lloyd, who was out of work, in charge of the house. The police were told by Eubanks that when he returned home in the evening he learned that Lloyd had "sold all the furniture, collected the cash and left town."

Despite the vote by the Senate declaring its wish that American troops should be recalled from Germany in view of the French invasion of the Ruhr Valley, it is understood President Harding will allow a small force that holds the Coblenz bridgehead to remain there. ENGLAND NOW HAS COUNTERPART OF THE KU KLUX KLAN

London, Jan. 11.—The Ku Klux Klan probably does not exist in England but it is said to have been the inspiration of a secret society which is reported to be flourishing in seaport towns.

England's counterpart of the Ku Klux Klan is known as "The Secret League of the Lash." It is said to have been formed by Englishmen who have taken into their own hands the punishment of those who offend the moral laws.

"The Secret League of the Lash," is most secret, but it is reported that its purpose is to prevent men, not of the white race from mingling with white women, in Cardiff and other seaport towns, where men of all races come down from the sea, there has been a growing tendency on the part of women to forget the color line, and in fact there have been several scandals which have aroused the people of the country.

Ignore Color Line

In London the investigations of Scotland Yard relative to alleged sale of narcotics has led to many statements which tend to show that the color line is not being strictly drawn. The English secret society which has taken upon itself to deal with offenses against the moral laws of the country and to establish itself as an interracial social arbiter is patterned after the Ku Klux Klan and has for its symbol a dagger surmounted with three "K's" yet it is denied that this organization has any connection with the Ku Klux Klan.

Lodges of "The Secret League of the Lash," are said to have been established in London, Cardiff, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Liverpool, Swansea and Glasgow.

To issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of the streets in Dods' First Addition to the City of Xenia, Ohio, by the construction of sanitary sewers and water mains.

Whereas, the City Commission of the City of Xenia, Ohio, has heretofore pursuant to a petition of the owners of three fourths of the foot frontage of the property on the streets of Dods' First Addition to said City, by resolution duly adopted on the 14th day of Sept. 1922, declared the necessity of improving Detroit Boulevard, Corwin Street, Edison Boulevard, Monroe Street, Hayes Street, Sheridan Street, Garfield Street and Park Drive, by the construction of sanitary sewers and water mains, and of levying a special assessment upon the property abutting upon said streets to pay for said improvement, all in strict conformity to law.

The said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, certified levied and extended upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers in the same manner and at the same time that the taxes for general purposes or each of said years are certified, extended and collected. That all funds derived from said tax levies hereby required, shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund which, together with all interest collected on the same, shall be irrevocably pledged for the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due.

And that the Auditor be and hereby is directed to certify to the County Auditor a copy of this ordinance as provided by law.

Section 9. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

FALLACIES

When a woman first wakes up to the fact that she can, or should, improve her looks, one of the first things she does is to read with a credulous mind all the articles, pamphlets and ads that she can find.

Some are very cautious, they say nothing, promise nothing. But most go to the extreme. "If you'll do so and so," they put it "you'll have glossy hair, bright eyes, long lashes, healthy teeth and an irresistible complexion practically over night."

From all this mass of writing, the reader is apt to develop a lot of fantastic ideas.

Now then—read this and see whether your common sense doesn't tell you that this is true.

You cannot restore in a few hours the skin you've taken years to ruin. You cannot grow hair on a scalp that is weak from long neglect—not all at once, that is. You cannot magically recapture your vanished youth, you cannot gain in an evening a social charm you've lacked all your life.

You can—and this is to cheer you up—slowly build up the thin hair to a thick growth. You can gradually restore the freshness and color to a skin that you have spoiled. You can go back years and years in the matter of youth, though to recapture it all may be impossible, and you can slowly develop social charm, no matter how awkward you've been in the past nor how homely you are at the moment. For this last comes from within you—your mind and heart are your own to develop, though your chin and nose may not be!

Any tiny improvement is worth trying to gain in the matter of looks—but you mustn't expect results immediately.

Jane B. L.—When the hair is as oily as yours an occasional dry shampoo will not hurt it.

A simple method is to separate the hair into strands and use soft towels, rubbing the hair with these exactly as if it were wet and you were drying it. This will remove much of the oil, but if it is still too oily dust a very little bit of orris root through the hair and remove it after a few minutes by shaking the hair vigorously.

Martha—At 45 years, with a height of five feet two your weight should not be more than 120 pounds.

Josephine F. R.—If you send me a self address stamped envelope I shall be glad to mail you the exercises.

Mrs. T. G.—A powder for very moist feet such as those of your husband, may be made at home from one part powdered alum to 12 parts of starch or talcum powder.

To overcome the odor he should scrub the feet each night with antiseptic soap, or use a soap in which there is salicylic acid as that is mildly antiseptic and also astringent. Then the feet should be rubbed with oil.

Waiting—The Colossus of Rhodes, probably the greatest statue ever erected in the world was set up in honor of the sun by Charles of Lindus in 290 or 288 B. C. It was the figure of an immense man, with one leg placed on each of two capes, and so large that vessel under full sail could easily pass between. It lasted about 50 years and was thrown down by an earthquake.

Poetic—Here follows the stanza of the line you ask about. It is by Longfellow, and appears in Part III. The Theologian's Tale: Elizabeth IV. INCURABLE.

The janizaries of the law are after me at times, and many heavy fines I draw for speed and kindred crimes; along the dusty road I scoot, a menace dire to man and brute; the wise one, when he hears me toot, for safety wildly climbs. Sometimes the judges scold and rail, a storm of words they raise, the while they sentence me to jail, to stay there sixty days; "this term," they say, "may curb your zeal, and when again you're at the wheel you in your inmost heart may feel that safety surely pays." This speed germ is a frightful thing, when once it's in the blood; and I shall always scorch and swing through gravel, dust and mud; I am as helpless as the bloke who has to have a jolt of coke; I'll always leave a trail of smoke, and scot and skip and scud. Thus spake the speed fiend as he left the hoosegow, cold and gray; of freedom he had been bereft for many a weary day; of high resolves his heart was full; no more wild driving would he pull, and he would dodge the cop and bull who guard the public way. Next day the village stood aghast, its face all swung ajar; a loosed motorist went past as goes a shooting star; again we saw the peelers hale the speed fiend to a dungeon stale; now he will get six months in jail, and lose his motor car.

Today's Talk

INTEREST

I pity the one who has no interest in things—especially the greatest of all things, Life.

I have noticed that the employee who takes an interest in every bit of clerkship or other mode of service, is the one who later so understands the business that he is summoned higher for tasks of greater import.

Interest is the food of conquerors!

Even as the plant sucks its life from the moisture and nourishment of the earth, so does the purposeful life take its growth from the interest which it attends jealously. I know of few unhappy BUSY lives.

It's so much better and richer to go to your bed at night with a tired—even aching—body, than to go there with a worried, dissatisfied spirit.

Get interests. One, two, three—dozens and dozens of them! And live with them, as with a group of friends.

If you have a boy, get him started in life by stimulating his interest, if you feel yourself growing stale and uninteresting to yourself, perhaps this brief Talk will help you. Get interested in new things. And keep it up!

OUR "OBSERVER" ON THE PARIS COMMISSION URGES REVISION OF TREATY OF VERSAILLES.

Germany was voted in wilful default of her 1922 coal deliveries by the Reparations Commission at Paris Tuesday at a session featured by an address by Roland W. Boyden, in which the American representative with the commission severely criticized the workings of the Treaty of Versailles in certain respects.

His strictures created much surprise and excited hardly less interest than the formal declaration of Germany's default.

The statement made by Mr. Boyden before the vote in the secret session was described by some of those who heard him as "a condemnation of the whole Treaty of Versailles and a suggestion that it should be revised as soon as possible in the interests of the economic revival of Europe."

The remarks of the American representative were currently referred to as "a sensational statement."

Neither Mr. Boyden nor Colonel James A. Logan, the other American representative, would discuss the proceedings or their part in them, feeling that the Americans, above all others, should observe the secrecy imposed by the commission.

Mr. Boyden was quoted as citing in support of his view the absurdity of declaring Germany in voluntary default on coal deliveries, when, as a matter of fact, all the deliveries in kind were entirely too great a burden upon Germany in her present condition, but that the commission, under the treaty procedure, could do nothing but recognize the default, and if he were voting he would be compelled to vote for the default.

It was a mistaken idea that it was easy to get deliveries of merchandise from Germany without affecting the financial and economic situation, the American representative is said to have pointed out. As a matter of fact, he thought that deliveries such as were being made were a serious strain on Germany's situation and one of the principal elements contributing to the weakness of Germany's position.

The vote for declaring Germany in default was three to one. Sir John Bradbury, the British member, casting the negative ballot.

The British view, it is learned, is quite similar to the American regards Germany's difficulties in meeting the coal requirements. Sir John Bradbury is reported to have said that German strikes and unavoidable transportation failures were responsible for a shortage of 750,000 tons, reducing the deficit in deliveries to 16½ per cent of the commission's demands.

GERMANY APPEALS TO "WORLD FORUM."

In a manifesto issued at Berlin Tuesday, President Ebert exhorts the inhabitants of the Ruhr Valley to remain calm "despite the continuation of French injustice and force, which constitutes a breach of the Versailles Treaty, committed against a disarmed and defenseless nation."

"The policy of force which has violated treaties and trampled the rights of humanity now threatens the key district of the German economic world," says the manifesto. "The execution of the peace treaty thus becomes an absolute impossibility, and at the same time the living conditions of the suffering German nation are disorganized."

Germany was ready to fulfill all the obligations within her power. She has now been attacked without being given a hearing. We lay the act of force before the forum of Europe and the entire world."

"Force remains force—whatever its guise." That declaration was made by Wilhelm Cuno, the Chancellor, in connection with the reported intention of France to extend her military occupation into the Ruhr region of Germany. The Chancellor added that Germany would regard the application of arbitrary force as a breach of the Versailles Peace Treaty and as "the use of might against a defenseless people."

PROSPEROUS RAILROADS VITAL TO BUSINESS.

Railroad prosperity in the United States is a fundamental necessity, for, until there are more lines, terminals, cars, locomotives and other facilities industry cannot expand, according to Elisha Lee, vice president. Eastern region, Pennsylvania Railroad System.

Mr. Lee told of this need in an address on "The Development of Transportation and Its Effects Upon Industries" before the Foremen's Club of the Philadelphia Industrial Association at the Stetson Auditorium. The speaker asserted that transportation always has paved the way for human progress.

"In our great machine of business," he said, "if any part runs too slow or too fast, the result may be to clog the whole. In every period of business activity a point is reached where the clogging of the railroads automatically checks expansion. We are in such a period now. I doubt if there is an industry of any kind that has not in recent months suffered from car shortages, embargoes or freight delays due to congestion."

"What is needed is to set the railroads free from restraints. In days gone by, when they were free, they went ahead very fast and made it possible for us to become the leading industrial nation. While that lasted we had the lowest rates, best service and highest wages of any railroads in the world."

"What is required is an aggressive demand for fair and just and helpful treatment of the railroads coming from those whose livelihood depends upon good railroad service."

During the years 1919 to 1921 the number of horseshoe manufacturing establishments was decreased from 20 to 12, due to the rapid growth of the automobile.

The scientific culture of pearl-bearing oysters has been carried on by experts in Southern Bohemia for a number of years. The oysters are opened once in eight years, and the last examination, which took place this year, resulted in finding five white pearls which were considered precious, 25 less valuable ones and 200 colored pearls.

The Quartermaster's Department in Philadelphia, Pa., manufactures all sewn clothing and equipment for the entire United States Army. TO FORM COUNTY ORGANIZATION OF FEDERATED P. T. A.

Final plans were laid at the meeting of the cabinet of the Federated Parent-Teacher Association, Friday, for the "pep" meeting to be held at the McKinley Auditorium, Thursday, January 25, at 7:30 o'clock to which all patrons of county schools will be invited, for the purpose of organizing a county-wide Federated Parent-Teacher Association.

The meeting of the cabinet was held in the office of Superintendent of City Schools, C. A. Waltz and was attended by County School Superintendent, H. C. Aultman, both school officials endorsing and aiding in the plan of the County P. T. A.

Paul C. Setson, Superintendent of the Dayton City Schools has been invited to the proposed "pep" meeting, to give a talk to the school patrons, pointing out the advantages of the Federated P. T. LIQUOR FLEET DROPS ANCHOR OFF NEW YORK

Met by Swarm of Small Craft Which Race to Shore With Wet Cargo

New York, Jan. 12.—Runners launched a concentrated attack on the Atlantic seaboard, apparently ignorant that the dry navy had just replaced its New York flagship Hansen with the Lexington, an armored chaser mounting machine guns.

A fleet of two steamers and 14 schooners dropped anchor off Sandy Hook, and immediately a swarm of 50 small craft put off from shore to meet them. Later they raced to cover with their booty, pursued by every speed boat the dry navy could muster.

Observers at Sandy Hook reported that the launch Margaret B, laden to the gunwales with whisky, was captured by a coast guard crew.

Observers ashore who professed intimate knowledge of the bootlegging trade estimated that each of the small craft, if it succeeded in running the gauntlet, would deposit a cargo of 75 to 500 cases at some cove along the Jersey or Long Island shores. The value of the liquor aboard the mother ships was roughly estimated in the millions, as each carrier was loaded to capacity.

The smugglers' latest offensive evidently caught directors of the dry navy unawares. John D. Appleby, marine prohibition director in this zone, hastily went into conference with E. C. Yellowley, state-federal enforcement agent, and a plan of campaign was whipped together.

At first it was decided to dispatch a flotilla from New York to seize the mother ships, but later this plan was changed. Instead, radio orders were flashed to dry vessels on patrol duty to watch all possible landing points and cut off the small crafts from reaching their shore bases.

Two factors were in the run runners' favor, and these the smugglers quickly seized. One was the fact that the New York dry naval squadron at present was being reorganized, with the Hansen transferred to Baltimore. The other was the fine weather following the gales that have raged off the coast.

INVASION IS NOW EXTENDING FURTHER

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The Lithuanian invasion of the international territory of Memel, on the East Prussian frontier, is extending, according to the latest report from Heydekrug, but there have been no collisions between the soldiers and the inhabitants. The invaders demand that the territory be made a part of Lithuania.

The French governor of the territory, which is under the jurisdiction of the league of nations, has but a small force at his disposal and the police of the district number only 100 men.

It is reported from Memel that in consequence of the Lithuanian invasion, the entente will send warships to reinforce the troops of occupation. Heydekrug was occupied by a force of 400 Lithuanians.

It is semi-officially announced here in Berlin that Germany does not intend sending troops to Memel, her attitude being that the allies must protect the rights and integrity of the Memel territory.

CELEBRATED FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR MARRIAGE IN THIS CITY RECENTLY

Mr. and Mrs. William Sutton, of 132 West Main street, are among the interesting couples of Greene county who have reached and celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Their anniversary was celebrated by a party of their friends and neighbors who called at their home, December 29, and arranged a most enjoyable informal social evening. The guests at the affair included:

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. John, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Foust, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John McClain, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence John, and daughter, Ada; Mr. and Mrs. Rankin Grieve, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kern, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Simes, of Dayton; Mrs. George Hall, and son, of Dayton; and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sutton, of Dayton.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutton were married in Xenia by the Rev. Mr. Marlay, December 29, 1872, and had resided on a farm near Xenia until eleven years ago, when they moved to this city, where they now reside.

Mrs. Sutton was born in Beaver creek township, August 10, 1856, the daughter of Aaron and Elizabeth Paxton. Mr. Sutton was born in New Jasper township, February 5, 1848, the son of Philip and Sara Sutton.

Of the six children born to this union, three survive—Mrs. Edward Kern, of this city; Joseph Sutton, of Goes Station, and J. Edwin Sutton, of Dayton.

AMERICAN JAZZ IS THORN IN SIDE OF LAW'S GOVERNMENT

London, January 13.—American "jazz" threatens to become a thorn in the side of the Bonar Law Government.

British hotels are hiring American "jazz artists" for their dance orchestras. British musical unions are taking exception to this and have carried their case to Commons.

Labor members of Commons have twitted Sir Montague Barlow, Minister of Labor, and demanded that he stop issuing permits for the entrance of American dance musicians into England to engage in work here, claiming that the issuance of these permits is robbing British subjects of their right to earn a living. While the Parliamentary battle over the merits of "jazz" rages on, the American "jazzers" continue to toot their saxophones to the joy of the dancing British.

The importation by a fashionable hotel of a highly-paid American saxophone player caused the rumpus. The salary of this musician is said to have staggered British musicians, who immediately arose in their wrath and demanded that they be given the opportunity to earn similar fancy salaries, but they found all of the positions filled.

Despite the opposition of labor organizations Richmond Temple, representative of a chain of fashionable hotels, will sail for America in January to scout for new American "jazz artists."

"There is no denying that American musicians furnish the best dance music in the world," Temple says. "We intend to have the best, and if the Government says we can't have the best, then we will close our dance floors, and let the British dancing public suffer."

MERRY GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK IN WALL STREET

New York, Jan. 13.—A merry time game of hide-and- seek cavorts daily about the corners of Wall Street's staid and solemn money temples, as strange a background for childlike pastime as one is want to find.

The actors in this queer comedy are adults. The conflicting forces—necessary fundamentals for an entertaining drama—are the curbstone merchant and the much abused police man.

It has to do with business and speed is the ulterior motive—speed or transportation on the part of the customers and speed of foot on the part of the merchant.

The street-fakir, so far as the territory that extends westward beyond the Hudson River is concerned, is almost a thing of the past. But not so in New York. Here he is still with us, accompanied with unending supplies of painless toothache gum, mending cement and patented knife-fountain pen-toothbrush—all in one. Gothamites in droves, they who have everything to make for a blase and tiring existence, still fall for his suave and oily words.

The fakirs' happy hunting ground is Father Knickerbocker's financial district, lower Manhattan. They would rather speak to a crowd of Wall Street habitués than to the greenest of provincials. Al. Baker, who has sold everything from paring knives to extract of malt along Nassau Street for the last ten years and has been chased by more cops than Sing Sing's oldest pickpocket, said: "The guys down here fall for it the easiest."

Asked why, Al replied: "I dunno they just do, that's all."

Enter the policeman. The New York curb merchant never bothers about procuring a license to give him legal right to reap profit from the sale of Dr. Bunkem's Famous Rattlesnake Salva. It's easier to get away with it, they say, when a fellow is fast on his feet.

They carry their wares in old suitcases and find their locations, usually in front of stately looking skyscrapers and begin their ballyhooing. It isn't long before the crowds gather. Human beings are the same on Broad street as they are in Clear Water, Mass.

"Gents, I've got here the greatest little thing on the market. The famous Empire Patented Key Ring. Holds twenty different keys and guaranteed not to bulge, rip, tear or stretch the pocket."

The words flow on, but the eyes are swifter than the tongue. They scan the horizon—east, west, north and south. A blue, brass-buttoned figure looms up from around a corner. A snatch of the suitcase and the curb merchant is dashing off and losing himself in the crowds. He finds another spot several blocks away devoid of blue and begins all over again.

"It doesn't mean anything," said Lou Mosher, another one of the "association." "The cops aren't bad sports. They only work under orders."

He was vending knitted ties—"sixty-nine cents a throw." A prospective customer stood next to him examining a pseudosilk cravat to make sure he wasn't going to be beaten in the transaction. Lou looked toward Broadway and caught the beam of brass buttons. He seized the tie from the customer's hands and made a hasty retreat, coat-tails and suitcase flying in the wind. The would-be customer moved on with chuckle. Such is the life of a business man.

Seek $8,000 For Chest Drive Which Starts In Xenia Next Wednesday

The sum of $8,000 will be sought by solicitors working in the Community Chest Campaign, when they start canvassing the city next Wednesday.

This is the amount finally set by the budget commission, of which City Manager S. O. Hale, is chairman, to supply the needs of the various charities listed for the nine months period ending next fall. The budget was reduced from $11,000 originally set, to the $8,000 amount when the period to be covered was shortened from a year to nine months.

Although the Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, has now expressed itself as unwilling to include its needs in the Community Chest campaign for next fall the shortening of the term from a year to nine months still leaves the question open and makes it possible for the Red Cross to join in the movement if its decision is changed before next fall.

The annual Community Chest campaigns are held to raise money for the Social Service League, the Sunshine Society and the Parent-Teacher Federation. This year a movement to acquire sufficient money to provide milk and dairy inspection for the city was included among the charities of the Chest Fund. The campaign is made annually in January, and the budgets fixed on the apportionment of these charities for a period of a year. The Red Cross must hold its annual roll call in October, and expressed a desire to have the Chest drive moved forward so that it could be included next fall. After this decision was arrived at and the budget committee was working to change the budget to cover the nine-months period, the Red Cross Chapter voted not to be included in the Community Chest drive next fall. The action of the chest committee in continuing the plan for a nine-months period, leaves that question still open for the Red Cross.

The Social Service League, officials of the Chest fund, point out, is the city welfare organization authorized by the charter, and is really a branch of the city government. City finances, however, do not admit of financing the organization, which is kept up by solicitation from the public. Its object includes work among the poor of a charitable nature, including medical treatment and nursing, and the maintenance of a baby clinic.

The Sunshine Society is a private organization that has been active for a number of years here, its object being to cheer up the sick, invalids and shut-ins. The Parent-Teacher Federation is undertaking work among the school children, including support of the Opportunity School and the provision of free luncheons for small youngsters.

The new provision in the Community Chest for a fund to provide health work for the city, is based on the offer of Antioch College to provide milk, dairy and water inspection for the city. The college maintains a department of health equipped to take care of this work and has offered four different systems of supervision to the city.

The most complete plan offered, would cost the city $2,500 a year which has been apportioned, by agreement with Dean Phillip C. Nash, of Antioch, at $1,800 for the nine months period. This plan offers tests of five water samples weekly; one inspection of all milk depots weekly and one inspection per month of 50 producers of milk. A reduction in price is offered for only two water samples weekly, which is all required by the State Department of Health and with which plan the city is now complying.

If the full quota of $8,000 set to cover the nine-months period by the budget committee is obtained, all of these movements will be assigned the amounts asked for. If the full amount is not attained, the total amount will be pro-rated among the various organizations. In that case, it would be necessary for the city to accept one of the cheaper plans offered by the College to provide this

"A lameness followed me for some time, and I felt that it was caused from kidney trouble. One bottle of Foley Kidney Pills had the desired effect," writes H. B. Arbuckle, South Barre, Vermont. Backache, rheumatism, dull headache, too frequent or burning urination are symptoms of Kidney and Bladder trouble. Disordered kidneys require prompt treatment. Neglect causes serious complications. MEMBERS OF BRITISH PARLIAMENT ARE KEENLY ANALYZED BY BLIND SCOTCHMAN FROM WHAT HE HEARS

Editor's Note—F. Martin, blind member of the British House of Commons, has written the accompanying article for International News Service, giving his impressions of Parliament "by ear."

London, Jan. 13.—When it is not possible to observe the faces and figures of one's colleagues in the House of Commons, the next best thing is to study their voices and accents. It has been perforce a habit of mine for some years to regard my fellow men in this manner; and Parliament, where events are ruled by discussion, gives me endless opportunities.

Never before has the Glasgow accent so dominated debate in the national assembly. The dialect made famous in London and elsewhere in England by Sir Harry Lauder is to be heard constantly in the House and the lobbies, and it is probably idle for me to pursue any longer my life-long crusade against the Sassenach view that this is the authentic Scottish accent. In the north of Scotland we do not like the Lauder tongue; but the Socialists of Clydeside are neither to be ignored nor denied at Westminster. And we poor Northerners must give in an accept our fate. From henceforth for evermore the voice of Glasgow will be accepted as the voice of Scotland; the more's the pity, but there it is!

"Wonderful Tongue"
A wonderful tongue it is, capable of infinite modifications. In its lowest keys it can be used as the most appealing and plaintive of instruments. When passion commands, it can become as raucous as a klaxon horn and about as menacing. There is Mr. Kirkwood, I can hardly believe that he loves the sound of his own voice; but it is certain he uses it with much frequency, mostly to interrupt opponents.

He has the full equipment of the street-corner orator. No gentleness or crudeness of his opinions. "Glesca" is the most aggressive pitch in his vocal stock-in-trade. The most reasonable argument must sound revolutionary when conveyed by such a medium. And then there is Mr. Shinwell, who does himself less than justice on the frequent occasions when he adopts the sneering tone. He makes my blood run cold then. It was thus the serpent spoke to the woman. What a fool she must have been to listen to him!

But, of course, the Labor Party is not all from Clydeside. The leader, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, is pretty much a countryman of my own. He speaks good Scots—which is, of course, excellent English. "Morre-ovver," as he would say himself, he has been endowed by nature with a fine voice, musical and resonant, having some very effective bass notes. He has, they say, acquired the perfect front-bench manner. This does not mean—as a cynical old Parliamentary hand vowed the other day—that his speeches are largely inaudible.

As I listen I gain the impression that this is a courteous gentleman prepared to give assistance to the Government so that work may be carried on in the meantime, but that there is to be a very definite period to the "meantime," and when we really get a satisfactory Parliament—that is to say, a Parliament with a Labor Ministry—then we shall be shown how things really ought to be done.

Mr. MacDonald has one oratorical vice. He is apt to mumble the final words of a sentence. This is exasperating to members who do him the honor to think everything he says is interesting.

Fascinating Pause

When he is speaking with deliberation and care he has a fascinating trick of pausing—not at the end of a sentence, but after the first word of a new sentence, and his favorite resting words are the "morre-ovver" and "Eut, Mr. Speaker."

I wish Mr. Lansbury were as clear in his diction as his leader. He is such a persistent Heckler of Ministers that one desires to know what he is bothered about. In endowing him with that muffled, deep-toned voice suggestive of a foghorn in mourning, Providence obviously intended that the member for Bow should follow the profession of funeral undertaker. Since, however, Mr. Lansbury has chosen to be the servant of the quick and not of the dead, I do after all hear what he is saying.

Mr. Bonar Law, in voice and vocal manner, sounds like the incarnation of the spirit of sweet reasonableness and Christian charity. He invariably secures silence when he speaks. Either we must be quiet or we miss the Premier's words, for he does not declaim or shout. His manner is suave, as silk, and in addition to being mild, he has a pretty turn of humor. He shines at question time, not with a hard, brilliant light, but with a mellow, stained-glass-window radiance; and he evidently believes in the maxim (for he consistently acts upon it) that brevity is the soul of wit.

Of his lieutenants on the front bench it may be said with truth that most of them have the valuable quality of being audible at question time. Mr. Ronald McNeill is the most impressive of all, as befits the spokesman of the Foreign Office in these days of strain and crisis. He has the grand manner, and when he says he wants notice of a supplementary question, or that he will refer the matter to the noble lord who is his leader, you feel that expostulation would be not merely useless, but indecent.

WILLARD GIVEN OVATION

New York, Jan. 13.—Of the heavy weight contenders introduced from the ring before the Johnson-Brennan bout last night, the reception accorded Jess Willard was by long odds the most enthusiastic and spontaneous. Harry Willis, the negro, was presented first. He received scattering of applause. Next came Tom Gibbons, but whatever greeting he received was drowned out by the demands for Willard. Jess finally eased his great bulk through the ropes and the acclaim was almost an ovation.

MAN IS ARRAIGNED FOR WIFE MURDER

Painesville, O., Jan. 13.—Henry D. Burns, Cleveland business man, will be arraigned Monday before Judge Arlington G. Reynolds, charged with first degree murder, in connection with the killing of his wife, Mrs. Hazel Burns, whose body was found buried in a shallow grave in Mentor marsh October 26 by two Cleveland dentists. Every effort will be made to rush the trial and it is likely that before the end of next week his trial will be under way, prosecutor Ralph M. Ostrander said today.

Meanwhile a lone prisoner in the Lake County Jail, Burns protests his innocence to the officers.

WOMAN ATTEMPTS TO ATTACK JUDGE

Cleveland, Jan. 13.—Her spirit uncowed, and still willing to meet an army of deputy sheriff and judges of the Common Pleas Court alone, or together, Julia Melino this morning sat in a cell at county jail. Late yesterday when, called before Judge Harry W. Jewell for sentence, after conviction on a charge of grand larceny, she made an attempt to attack the judge, and was subdued only when four deputy sheriffs handcuffed her.

"You can all go to blazes," she shrieked. "I won't work at your old Marysville reformatory."

TURKS WIN ANOTHER POINT

Lausanne, Jan. 12.—There will be no exemption from military service for the Christian inhabitants of Turkey. At the near east conference the allies yielded before the united and determined opposition of the Turk and abandoned the project, especially affecting the Armenians, whereby Christians would be relieved of necessity of serving under the Turkish flag by paying an indemnity.

COUNTY MINISTERS TO ATTEND MEETING AT STATE CAPITAL

Xenia and Greene County ministers are planning to attend the fourth annual State Pastors' Convention, to be held in Columbus, January 22 to 24.

Special efforts to obtain an outstanding group of speakers for the convention, have resulted in the formulation of a program filled with inspiration and with practical advice and assistance for pastors, as they set out upon their year's activities, according to advance notices.

The official directing head of Protestant endeavor in the United States, Dr. Robert E. Speer, President of the Federal Council of Churches, will bring the message of that body to the Ohio ministers in two addresses.

Representatives of interdenominational movements in the field of international relations, race problems, industrial relations, public morals, and other matters of common interest to all churches will present authoritative information on these subjects.

Recognized leaders of wide practical experience in such matters, as evangelism, religious education, local church co-operation, and other branches of church activity, will place suggestions, based on actual experience before the ministers.

Cedarville College Notes

The students of Cedarville College have resumed their usual duties after a happy vacation. Besides pursuing their studies they are busy preparing for mid-year exams and registering for the following semester. It is hoped that the enrollment of the student body for the second semester will exceed that of the first.

Two fast basketball games were played in the college gym on Friday evening, January 5. The first game was won by the Cedarville boys from the Boring-Yanks of Xenia by a narrow margin, while the college girls won over the Wilmington College girls in a well balanced contest.

A number of the college students attended a party on the evening of January 2, given by Miss Florence Smith.

Miss Ellen Tarbox entertained some of the college students Saturday evening, January 6.

The student body and the faculty of Cedarville College were glad to welcome Miss Winifred Stucky back to school at the close of the holidays. Miss Stucky has nearly recovered from a recent operation.

Miss Wilma Arnott, who was called to the bedside of her mother some weeks before school closed for vacation, has returned to Cedarville to resume her studies.

Mr. Melvin McMillan, of the furniture and undertaking firm of J. H. McMillan and son, of Cedarville, is spending the week at the furniture market at Grand Rapids, and Chicago.

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

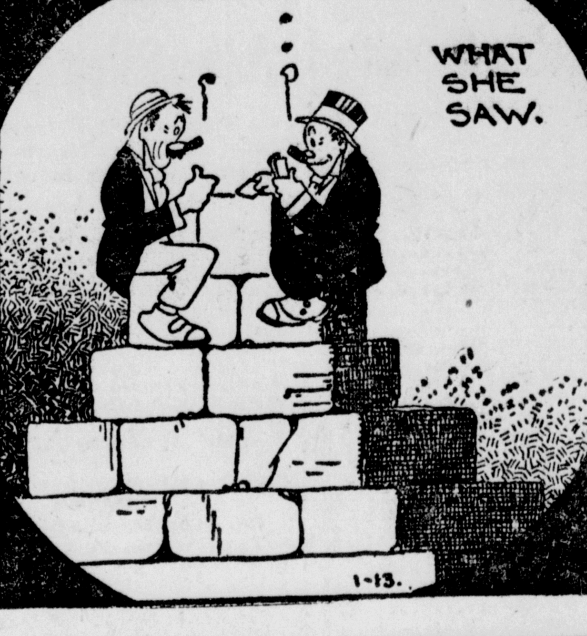

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."

—Mrs. M. OHLEN, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

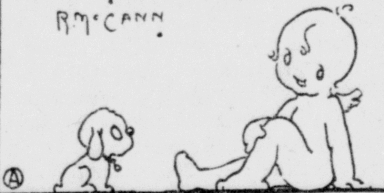

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

DEBS' INVITATION SPLITS CLUB UNITY

Cleveland, Jan. 12.—Cleveland City Club is rent from center to circumference today by the recent action of the directors in voting to invite Eugene V. Debs, noted socialist leader to address the organization. Up to this morning eight members of the organization, representing the more conservative element, have voiced their protests by resignations while a petition is being circulated by others asking the directors to reconsider their action.

Debs, pardoned by President Harding after having been convicted of violation of the espionage act during the war by inciting men to resist the draft in a speech at Canton, some time ago, promised Peter Witt, a so-called "radical" member of the club, to accept an invitation to speak.

The club in its "creed" declares that it maintains an "open forum" where it will hear men of all views.

WANT CAPITAL OF ENGLAND CHANGED

London, Jan. 13.—The English labor members of Parliament have another grouch. They complain that the Houses of Parliament are too far from the rest of England, Scotland and Wales and are telling their constituents about it in no uncertain terms.

Mr. Maxton, of Glasgow, makes the most original proposition. "I think," he told his constituents, "that the Houses of Parliament should be put in the middle of York-shire."

"It is a bad policy to have the House of Commons in London, which is not a representative town. The people round about Westminster are not representative of the people of Great Britain. There are more wealthy people in that district than any other."

Chapters From A Woman's Life

HER LOVE COST HER LIFE

CHAPTER 77

Walter had been gone but a few moments when a nurse beckoned me. I followed her into a room where Helen lay pale as the pillow upon which her head rested, but conscious. "I'm done for, Mrs. Page," she whispered as I bent over her. "Don't let Walter feel badly. I—"

"Oh, no, you'll get well!" I interrupted. "It was very brave of you."

"No, not brave. You see I love Walter. You mustn't tell his wife."

"He never loved me, was just kind like he is to everyone, and full of nonsense. But I—I love him—and I'm glad—I'd rather die—than—"

"No, Helen, you aren't going to die!"

I again interrupted her. For a time she was silent then began to talk again, disconsolately, weakly, going over times she had been with Walter—saying I hated her because she loved him and so on.

"Mrs. Page doesn't hate you, Helen," I said distinctly. "She told me she didn't." I bent over, and with streaming eyes, kissed her.

"That's nice—don't ever tell—her—I loved Walter. I—was going to steal—Jackie—but I wasn't—quite bad enough. I couldn't—hurt—her so."

While she talked a change had come over her face. I opened the door and motioned the nurse. She looked at her a moment, then called the doctor.

"Internal bleeding," he whispered. "She's almost gone."

"Don't tell—her—I loved—Helen" whispered. Then when I could see through my tears, the nurse was drawing the sheet up. Helen Ralston had died.

While I sat in the waiting room until Walter should come my thoughts raced.

She had died for him, had thrown herself in front of him to save him. Should I tell him of her dying confession of love?

For what seemed hours, but was in reality but about fifteen minutes I pondered that question. There was nothing to be gained by telling him, his remorse would be great enough as it was.

He knew she had been killed when trying to save him. If he knew she had done it deliberately, because she loved him, his remorse would be greater, the effect upon him one I dared not face. With his disposition, there was no telling what he might do.

So before he appeared I determined to tell him nothing. Not even about Jackie. She had said he never loved her—perhaps that softened my feeling toward her.

But I no longer hated her, and had she lived even after the confession I felt I could never have hated her again. She had wanted to take Walter from me, but she also had saved him for me.

"She's gone, Walter—15 minutes ago," I told him gently. "Shall we see her, than we must make all the arrangements necessary."

Without a word he followed me into the room where she lay. As he looked at her, beautiful in death, his tears fell fast.

"It was so unnecessary," he said softly. "If she had just kept still and let them take what they wanted it wouldn't have happened."

He had given me my cue. "She was always impulsive," I said. "Did things, then thought afterward. The sight of the revolver frightened her."

"Poor girl, if I hadn't offered to take her home she would have gone safely in the subway. I never shall forgive myself—never!"

"Don't blame yourself for what could not be helped," I said.

And I couldn't help but feel that I was right in keeping her confession to myself; that she had been right in saying Walter did not love her.

Walter's grief was real, very real, yet it was not the grief of a man who has lost a woman he loves.

We made all arrangements possible that night, then went home. In the morning we would take care of all expenses of the grieving aunt, who arrived at the hospital before we left.

"She was all I had—a headstrong girl—but not bad at heart," the aunt said sobbing.

I told her how terribly we felt that it had happened when with us.

"Don't blame yourselves," she said. "but get those hold-up men if you can and make them pay for murdering her."

"If it is humanly possible we will get them," Walter assured her, but we never did although the police were at once told of the affair.

Walter also hired a private detective. It was just one of the many murders that go unpunished.

Hints to the Housewife

Dear Mrs. Thompson: About two weeks ago one of my girl friends called up and asked me to have a date with a boy she knew. We went car riding and when he brought me home he asked me to write. I didn't promise whether I would write or not.

He didn't ask for another date and I didn't ask him to come again, as I supposed it was his place to ask me.

Since then my girl friend has seen him and she said he wanted her to ask me for another date with him. She told him that he would have to ask me. Then he said he would call me, but he hasn't called yet. Do you think I ought to write to him?

Do you think the reason he does not ask for another date is because I didn't invite him to come again? If that is the reason, do you think I ought to write to him asking him to come to see me sometime, or should I let him go?

I am not in love, as some girls say, but I would hate to have him feel that I didn't like his company at all, because I did.

SUSIE ANN.

I would advise you to let the boy go. When he wants to see you again he will ask. To write to him would give him a chance to think you were running after him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please print a list of things to eat which will not make one fat?

IGNORANCE.

First of all, do not drink liquids with your meals. Besides, avoid potatoes and other starchy foods, fat meats, milk and eggs. Fruits, except bananas, will not increase your weight. Lean meat which is thoroughly cooked is all right.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl eighteen years of age and have a boy friend twenty-two. He is a gentleman everywhere and so my parents do not object in my going with him.

I have known this boy two months. Now I have met another boy at my aunt's home who has asked to take me places. He has been with me alone two times. He asked me to kiss him good-night and I refused. Since then I have felt that I ought not to pay any more attention to him, although I would like him for a friend.

It happened one evening that the boy twenty-two years of age called at my home unexpectedly and saw the other boy with me. The same evening he left very early and did not talk to me as much as usual, which meant he was broken-hearted.

I like the boy of twenty-two and would be very glad to regain his friendship. Will you tell me what I should do, for he will not come to see me anymore? F. S. I.

The young man seems rather free with his request for a kiss. I think you did the right thing in refusing him, and I would advise you to continue to do so, unless your friendship ends in something deeper. It is not an unusual thing for a young man to ask to kiss a girl. If, therefore, you have no further criticism and would like to keep him as a friend, I think it would be all right for you to do so.

You cannot force the other young man to come to see you. Be friendly to him when you meet and he may ask to come back of his own accord.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please advise me regarding the removal of superfluous hair. Would you recommend the electric needle or is there any other permanent way? INQUIRER.

There is no permanent way except the electric needle, and even that cannot be guaranteed to be permanent.

Apple, Date and Celery Salad—Pare one large, choice apple, quarter, core and cut into small pieces and squeeze over these the juice of half a lemon. Cut five choice stalks of celery in small pieces. Pour boiling water over half a pound of dates. Stir the water through them, skim to an earthen dish and dry in the oven. When cold cut each into four or five lengthwise pieces. Mix the apple, celery and dates together and add a generous half cup of mayonnaise dressing and stir again. Garnish with celery leaves if desired.

Cream Cookies—One cup of sugar, one cup shortening (half butter and half lard), two eggs, one cup sour cream, one teaspoon of soda dissolved in cream, pinch of salt. Flavor to taste. Mix in order given and add two teaspoons of baking powder and enough flour to make a stiff dough. Bake in a moderate oven.

HOLIDAY DISHES.

Pigeon Pie—Six pigeons dressed and split, six or eight tablespoons flour, salt and pepper, pork or bacon fat, bay leaf, one and one-half cups dried celery, one can peas, one cup boiling water, one pint milk (scalded), six tablespoons butter, six tablespoons flour, biscuit dough.

Dredge pigeons with flour, sprinkle with salt and pepper and saute in hot pork fat. Place in a saucepan or casserole. Add bay leaf, celery, boiling water and simmer slowly until tender—about one and one-half hours. Add two and one-half to three teaspoons salt.

Thicken with butter and flour rubbed together, add peas and scalded milk. Pour into a baking dish, cover with short biscuit dough rolled about one-quarter inch thick. Bake in a hot oven until brown.

Squab en Casserole—Three large squabs, one cup chicken stock, one cup small potato balls, one can asparagus tips or one bunch asparagus, twelve small white onions, three to four tablespoons of melted butter or substitute.

Dress, clean and truss the squabs and place in a large casserole, brush with melted butter and bake in a hot oven ten minutes. Add stock, cover and cook until squabs are tender. Add potato balls and onions boiled and sprinkled with melted butter.

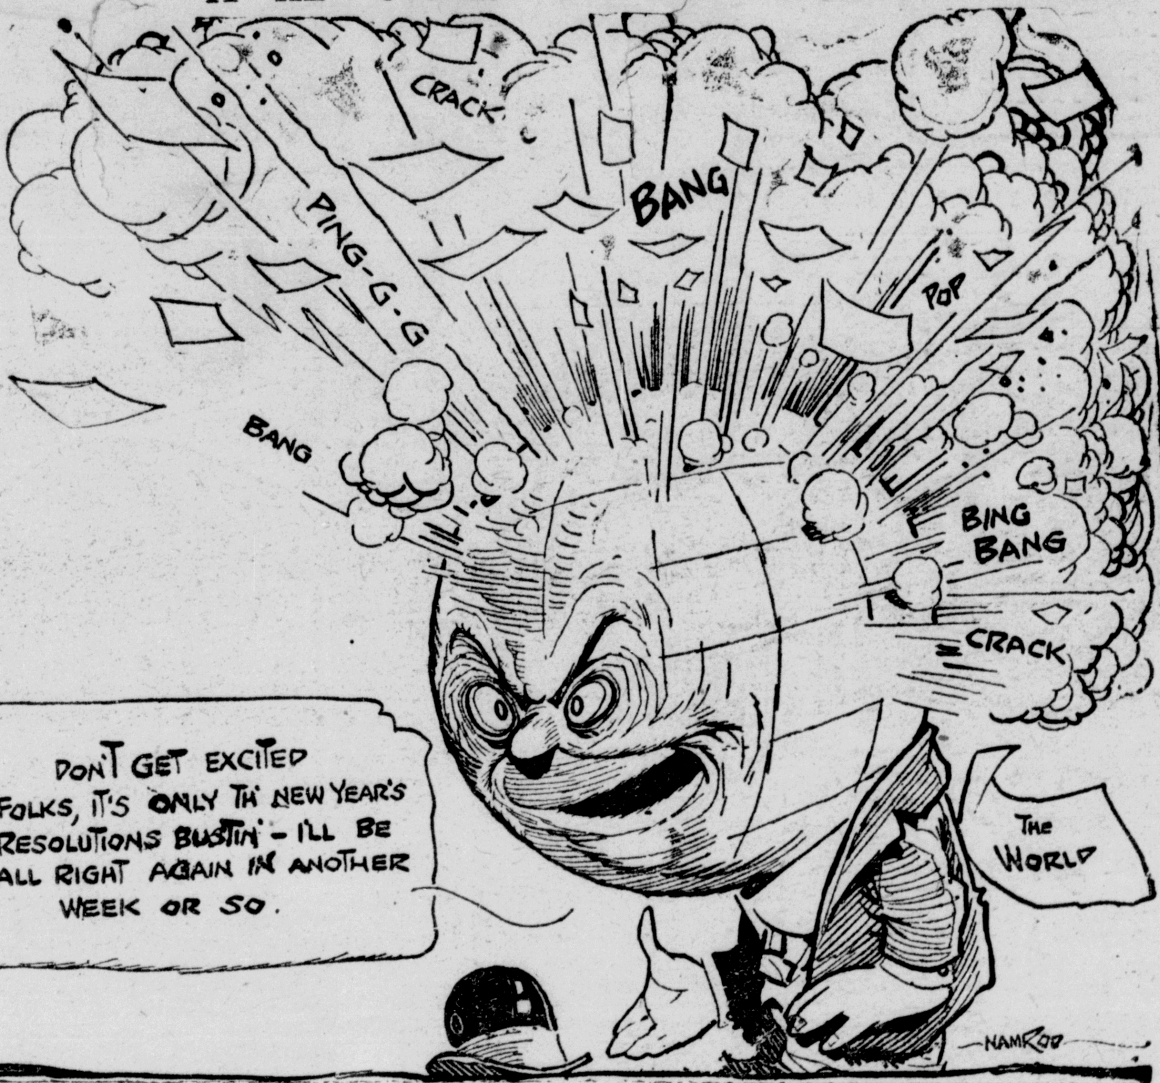

MEAT SAUCES.

Olive Sauce—Ten olives, two cups brown gravy. Remove stones from olives, leaving meat as whole as possible. Cover with boiling water and boil fifteen minutes. Drain and mix with gravy.

Orange Sauce—One-quarter cup butter, one-quarter cup flour, one and one-third cup brown stock, one-half teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, juice of two oranges, rind of one orange cut in shreds, one teaspoon white wine vinegar.

Brown butter, add flour, salt and cayenne. Stir until well browned. Add stock gradually and cook until thickened. Just before serving stir in orange juice and rind and vinegar.

IT ALL COMES IN A LIFE TIME

CRIME WORLD

SIR BASIL THOMSON, former head of Scotland Yard detectives, says that nine out of ten criminals "go bad" before reaching 21. Thomson advances the new theory that the cause of the majority of crimes is the love of acting—the desire for applause—so common among children.

"Grown older, the criminal plays to a gallery of fellow-criminals. It is untrue that the criminal is born, not made. It's the sporting chance that makes crime—the same thing that makes the railway traveler willing to ride on a train—he is sure that he will not be the one out of a million people to be killed in an accident."

No criminal, of course, when he commits his crime believes that he will be caught. He realizes that the odds are heavily against him, and increasingly so as civilization knits the world closer together. But he hypnotizes himself into the belief that the ones to be caught will be others, not including himself.

The presence of this daring and gambling element in crime may give the law-breaker a temporary thrill. He is too much of a fool to realize that all gamblers, from crap shooters and stock market speculators to criminals, eventually lose, it's only a matter of time. This is proved by the laws of mathematics, dealing with "probabilities."

As for the cause of crime, Sir Basil Thomson traces it to the average person's instinctive love of play-acting and applause. Obviously, the less crime is glorified in fiction, the less the child-mind will hoax itself with a belief that crime leads to applause and "fame." The applause, if any, comes only from a few who are not worth while. Otherwise, outside of detective stories, applause is reserved until the criminal is captured and punished.

LIVING LONG

HALF of us live to be 60, and nearly a fourth of us reach 75. This cheerful state of affairs is announced by Dr. Louis I. Dublin, chief statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

"The average person at 50," says Dr. Dublin, "may now hope to live to the age of 71—or, as we put it, the average length of life remaining to each one of the survivors at age 50 is 21 more years. Even at 70 there is more than nine years of expectation and so on in a diminishing degree to the end."

The average baby born in America in 1901 could be expected to live 49 years 3 months.

The average baby born in 1923 should reach 65, thanks to great strides by medical science, especially in saving the lives of children during babyhood and early childhood.

As a matter of fact, children born in 1923 may, for all we know, live to an average age of 100, 150 or more. Startling discoveries, in the way of prolonging human life, may be made before many more years, by the use of radium or artificially stimulating the endocrine glands of the body—thyroid, adrenals, etc.

The great strides that have been made in the last 20 years, in prolonging the average duration of human life, have been mostly by reducing infantile death rate. Science is turning its attention to similar service for mature people. Much is possible. And considerable is probable.

LET'S stand upon the corner of most any town at all, and watch the march of people going by. Let's view the little youngsters and the grown-ups, short and tall—just give them all the overlooking eye.

There's Mrs. Anybody with a coat that's made of mink; her husband's by her side in brand new gloves. No doubt the Mrs. wonders what the neighbors all will think, for envy is a thing a woman loves.

And little Willie Jones is out and dressed up spic and span. The shoes he wears are patterned after dad. He hopes that folk who see him will remark that he's a man. You know how things like that make youngsters glad.

And sister Susie's on parade in fancy dress of blue. She has some brilliant ribbons in her hair. She struts around where folks may see—she has naught else to do. She simply feels the spirit in the air.

What spirit? you are asking. Well, it comes but once a year. The aftermath of rushing Yuletide trade. When fancy frock and new things on the sidewalks will appear as folks take Christmas presents on parade.

500 NEIGHBORS FETE OHIO'S "CORN KING"

Nearly 500 Licking County farm people gathered last week at the Croton Centralized School for a community supper in honor of their neighbor, William H. Gilmore, the man, who last summer broke all known records by raising 134 bushels of corn to the acre, on 10 acres.

But they did not hear the whole story. Mr. Gilmore, was overcome by the demonstration accorded him, and had to stop halfway through. "I am no speaker," he said, mopping his face with his handkerchief. "This place seems hotter to me than any cornfield I was ever in." Being assured that somebody else would do the talking for the rest of the evening, he recovered rapidly and took his place at the head of the board for the "community spread" of 500 places prepared by the neighbors in his honor.

WHEN FARMING PAYS

An Analysis of the Economic, Political and Social Conditions Which Make Farming Profitable

Chicago is the world's greatest livestock market.

During this year the Chicago market received and sold about 17,000,000 animals for half a billion dollars, according to statistics appearing in the Breeders' Gazette. These figures represent a gain over 1921, both in number and value. In 1919 Chicago disposed of 18,215,000 animals at higher prices than prevail today. Since the Union Stockyards were opened, a grand total of 657,000,000 animals have been sold within its gates for the vast sum of $15,000,000,000.00. More than 100 established commission houses sell livestock regularly on the Chicago market for patrons living in 22 states.

These figures describe the outlet for one of the great branches of agricultural production, and are of general interest to farmers because nearly every farmer in this part of the country is at one time or another a livestock raiser. The proportions which the slaughter of animal life has attained in the effort to supply an ever-growing population with food are sobering. Comfort lies in the development which has made this slaughter systematic and as merciful as possible.

If the firms of Armour and Co. and Morris and Co. were considered "trusts" or "incubuses," how will the more bolshevistically inclined regard the proposed consolidation of these two great factors in the packing business.

Wholesale grocers take the consolidation as a covert admission of failure in direct selling to retailer as against the plan of marketing goods through the wholesale grocer. M. L. Toulme, secretary of the National Wholesale Grocers Association, suggests that "direct selling to retailers of competitively manufactured, non-perishable food products is impractical from a competitive standpoint." The costs of going around the wholesale grocer are too high.

If the big packers have not already been able to make their tem of distribution profitable through the economies of large-scale operation, it is difficult to see how they can hope to make it so by further consolidation and enlargement. The consolidation might conceivably simplify problems of finance and management however and thus result in larger profits.

The distribution costs of the packers are more burdensome than before the war and they find the competition of local packers more onerous.

Crew of Coast Guard Survives

After Night of Terrible Exposure in Seeking to Rescue Two Men On Wrecked Lumber Schooner Party Returns
HANDS AND FEET ARE BADLY FROZEN
Hope for Men Had Been Given Up After Night Search for Missing Crew Had Failed To Ascertain Their Safety

York, Beach Me., Jan. 13.—After a night of terrible hardship and fighting, Captain Walter E. Sprague and the crew of six of the Isle of Shoals coast guard station returned today as from the dead.
They had been missing since they put out in power boat to the rescue of two men on the wrecked lumber schooner Ralph W.
Making an eleven mile run from the Isle of Shoals station were forced to give up. Their boat had become so laden with ice that she was unable to make any progress. They put in at a small cove on Smuttys Island, one of the Isle of Shoals group, temporarily.
Throughout the night hundreds of Isle of Shoals people, including relatives of the missing men, patrolled the shore and kept beacons burning. Hope of ever seeing the men alive again had almost been given up when they reappeared today. All are under medical care.

SAY MURDER SQUAD CRUCIFIED DANIEL AND TOM RICHARDS
Court House, Bastrop, La., Jan. 13.—A "murder squad" of seven picked men, carefully chosen from the membership of a "black hooded mob," crucified Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, of Morehouse parish on the night of August 24 after subjecting them to frightful torture, it was learned today from evidence in the hands of the state's prosecutors.
A half dozen witnesses saw the "murder squad" en route with their captives to a spot deep in the Coteau swamp lands where Daniel and Richards kept a "rendezvous with death." Two more men saw the murderers homeward bound from Lake La Fourche after they had sought to hide their infamous crime by tossing the mutilated bodies into a watery grave.
This much the state has established by unimpeachable witnesses at the open hearing. One more witness is yet to appear who will tell of seeing the "murder squad" fresh from commitment of their crimes, en route to La Fourche lake with the bodies of Daniel and Richards. When this man whose identity has only been hinted at in court, is produced, the state's preliminary case will be completed.

Will R. Norsworthy, Morehouse parish planter, testifying, credited Captain J. K. Shipwith, leader of the parish organization of Ku Klux Klan, with having said Richard and Daniel "knew too much."
Norsworthy was testifying as to a conference he said was held with Shipwith in the latter's home at Vaughan, La. The discussion led up to the disappearance of Daniel and Richards.
"He made the remark that all of this trouble had occurred from two very sorry characters," Norsworthy testified, "and said if the boys hadn't been so smart we intended to give them a trial in the courts for shooting at Dr. McKoin," but he said they got so smart and had too much to say at the ball game and there at Jim Norsworthy's barbecue that he said "the boys" he didn't say "we" that time—he said "the boys decided they knew too much."

The testimony of Norsworthy, with statements of Robert L. Dade, mayor of Mer Rouge, and Kelly Harp, that black masks were used by a Klan band on a march to the village of Stampley last summer, and the testimony of Joseph Davenport, Mer Rouge merchant, were high lights of the proceedings.
Mayor Dade said he wore a black mask furnished him by Edward Ivy, a fellow clansman, when he was picked up in Mer Rouge and asked to accompany the band on a trip to Stampley to investigate a report that a negro was operating a gambling house there, where both white men and negroes gambled. Dade said Dr. McKoin also was a member of the raiding party. McKoin, Dade said, was garbed in white. Harp declared he also wore a black mask on the raid.
Davenport testified as follows: "My family has resided in the Mer Rouge district of Morehouse parish back 117 years. It lived in peace until the advent of the Klan. We then had to get permission from high officials of the Klan to continue our residence in our old home town."

Attorneys for both sides held a conference to arrange for the trial of the next lot of the 71 under indictment. Chief counsel August W. Kerr has asked the prosecution to give him the names of the men who are to be tried in order that he may prepare this defense. There are eighteen in the next lot and some of them must be tried as they can not be held in jail after February 1 without a trial.

RUM RUNNING TRAFFIC BROKEN UP IS BELIEF

New York, Jan. 13.—The rum running traffic, which was formerly the greatest national menace against the Volstead prohibition law, has been completely broken up by the U. S. Government, it was declared here today by federal prohibition Director J. D. Appleby, of this district.
Director Appleby's vigorous and emphatic declaration was called forth by a report that twenty-seven "rum ships" were off the New Jersey coast and that 35,000 cases of contraband whiskey had been landed in a single day by motor boats and other small craft operating between the whiskey fleet and the shore.
"Maybe ten or fifteen cases were landed," admitted Chief Appleby, "but no more than that. Why, all the fishing boats off the entire New Jersey coast could not land 35,000 cases of whiskey in a week. It is ridiculous, absurd to say that that much was landed in a day."
Director Appleby said the prohibition enforcement navy which patrols the New York and New Jersey coasts raiding and driving off rum runners has been brought up to the highest possible point of efficiency and that it has now succeeded in driving the rum fleet from the New York and Jersey shores. Rum running was made so hazardous and costly that the dealers in illegal whiskey were content to turn to lawful activities, the federal official declared.

MINISTER'S DEATH BAFFLES POLICE; WILL PROBE CASE

Tardiness in Reporting Case Will Be Investigated By Authorities

New York, Jan. 13.—Medical Examiner Norris announced that he intended to conduct an investigation into the tardiness of the police in notifying him of the suicide of the Rev. Dr. Percy Gordon, former assistant rector of fashionable St. Bartholomew's church.
Dr. Norris indicated that on Monday he would call before him the manager of the Hotel Wolcott, where the clergyman was found, shot through the head, in the bathroom of his suite; the first patrolman who worked on the case, and his lieutenant.
According to the medical examiner, he was not notified until nearly five hours after death had occurred. Dr. Norris was unable to advance a motive for the suicide, asserting that he had turned over unopened two letters found in the suite. One was addressed to Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of the Episcopal church which Dr. Gordon had served, and the other to the clergyman's son, George Gordon, under secretary at the American embassy in Paris. Dr. Parks showed a decided disinclination to discuss the case.
As mysterious as the motive leading to suicide was the cause of Dr. Gordon's resignation. None of the vestry would comment upon it. Dr. Gordon was separated from his wife for several years.

Darby of the Hamilton county courts, chairman of the legislative committee, has made a complete survey of the situation in Ohio courts and, while the importance of needed changes in the criminal laws is to be stressed, some proposals may be made in connection with civil statutes. France Agrees To Moratorium

POINCARÉ SEEKS SETTLEMENT OF RUHR TROUBLE

Premier Said to Be Arranging Meeting With Nations Leaders

Paris, Jan. 13.—There are many reports of the possibility of Premier Poincaré arranging a meeting with the Germans, to which would be invited Great Britain, Belgium and Italy, and perhaps the United States.
The purpose of such a meeting would be to try to arrange a settlement with Germany, now that France has seized guarantees which she regards as necessary to the fulfillment of any terms which might be presented to Germany.
M. Poincaré left the way open when he declined the proposal of Hugo Stinnes, the German industrialist, to come to Paris after the breakdown of the recent premiers' conference in an effort to reach a direct understanding between France and the German industrialists.
If no such meeting develops, the reparations commission is expected to grant Germany a moratorium by a majority vote some time before the newly granted delay expires.
A general outline of the new French plan for a moratorium was circulated privately here. It provides for a two-year moratorium, with certain conditions.
The new plan is described as being a decided modification of the French position regarding reparations; but it is taken for granted in reparations circles that there is not the slightest possibility that France will give up her present position in the Ruhr until Germany at least has carried out the conditions of any moratorium that may be granted.
The reparations commission will grant Germany a further delay, until Feb. 1, in the indemnity payment of 500,000,000 gold marks due next Monday. The decision will be taken at the request of France. Although the "official" reason is to give the French delegation more time in which to prepare new moratorium conditions, it is believed that the increasing indication of passive resistance by Germany to the French occupation of the Ruhr has much to do with it.

WIZARD DEFENDS K.K.K. IN ANSWERING CHARGE

Atlanta, G., Jan. 13.—Asserting the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan does not have as part of its regalia for use at any time black robes or black hoods, as indicated in testimony produced at the hearing into the murders of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards in Morehouse parish, La., Dr. H. W. Evans, Imperial wizard of the Klan today hinted some drastic action may be expected against the Morehouse parish Klan, if developments connect the order with the depredations of hooded bands there.
"We are carefully watching the developments of the investigation now being conducted at Bastrop and Morehouse parish, La., said the wizard" and we shall take such action as the facts developed in this investigation will warrant."
Dr. Evans was considerably worried over charges which have been hurled at the Klan incident to the investigation.
"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan

CZAR OF NEEDLE NOW APPOINTED

New York, Jan. 13.—The latest addition to America's list of industrial czars was preparing to take his throne today.
He is David N. Mosesohn, New York attorney, selected by the Associated Dress Industries, representing the largest dress manufacturing concerns in the United States to be supreme arbiter of the industry.

The new "dressmaker dictator" will rule over the knights of the needle in much the same manner as Will Hays controls the movies, Augustus Thomas the theatrical world and Judge K. M. Landis, lords it over baseball.
His appointment is regarded by dress men as the first big step to "clean up" the needle industry from the manufacturing standpoint.

Reparation Commission Gives Germany Two Weeks' Grace to Pay Indemnity—French Adopt Conciliatory Attitude

INVADERS STRENGTHEN THEIR POSITIONS

Troops Cease Military Operations and Take Over Work Of Police Duty—Mission Believed Completed.

Essen, Jan. 13.—France and Belgium today tentatively agreed to pay in cash for the coal taken from the Ruhr coal fields.
The action of the French represented a decided back down from the drastic program maintained when the French troops crossed into the Ruhr. The original plan contemplated seizure of all coal in order to meet the deliveries pledged by Germany under the Versailles treaty.
Paris, Jan. 13.—The inter-allied reparations commission today gave Germany a fortnight's grace to pay the five hundred million gold marks indemnity installment due Monday. In the meantime France will draw up new conditions upon which she will consent to an indemnity moratorium for Germany.

France's conciliatory move towards Germany was believed to have resulted from the policy of passive resistance adopted by the Germans in the newly occupied zones in the Ruhr valley. The attitude of the Germans made it evident that France would have a difficult time increasing reparations payments from Germany even with productive guarantees imposed with military strength.

Members of the cabinet are hopeful that in the next two weeks Germany will in some way find the 500,000,000 gold marks that are due. This is the first of the quarterly payments to fall due since the expiration of the partial moratorium granted under the so called Brussels plan.

Sir John Bradbury, British representative on the reparations commission, who is the only member to maintain a moderate policy towards Germany, attended today's meeting.
According to the Petit Parisien the delay is necessary to learn Germany's intentions.

The Petit revealed that there had been a disagreement between French and Italian experts on the subject of guarantees. The Italians were invited to meet the French at the foreign office this afternoon when it was expected the difficulties would be ironed out.

France may be balked in her plan to carry out the so called Dariaf program for creating a separate state in the German Rhineland if the British continue to hold their bridgehead position on the Rhine. This position controls the principal railroads running through the Rhineland which the French would have to hold to be free to put their separatist plans into effect.

Amsterdam, Jan. 13.—French military operations in the German Rhineland have ceased, said advices from Dusseldorf today. Unless there is a clash, which would lead to further occupation, French troops from now on will be utilized for police duty to protect German mines and factories and French engineers and technicians on duty there.
General DeGoutte, commander of all the French forces in the Rhineland was quoted as saying that his mission was finished. He said the whole movement through the Ruhr was a "police measure."
The French have taken over control of all the German railways in the occupied zone.

Paris, Jan. 13.—The semi official Matin today predicted an immediate extension of German occupation by French troops including the great industrial city of Bochum. Bochum already is surrounded by French troops.

Berlin, Jan. 13.—French troops holding the Ruhr coal fields are strengthening their military positions. The first serious trouble in the Ruhr valley threatened today when some of the coal companies were unable to pay all their men. The German coal and iron magnates and the civilian officials are refusing to co-operate with the French.

CHURCH CROWDED FOR SERVICES

The First M. E. Church was crowded last night at the evangelistic service. The "Sunshine Choir" was there a hundred strong and sang with enthusiasm under the leadership of Prof. Kurtz. Some very excellent voices have been found among the children of the church and community.
Mary Claire, Betty Kingsbury and Roy Siefert sang solos with the poise and precision lacked by many older singers, while the sweetness of their young voices surprised and delighted the audience. There was also a quartette and duet furnished by the children, besides a fine solo by Prof. Kurtz himself, altogether making a very unusual song service.

It was Sunday School night and the classes were very well represented and sat with their teachers.
The sermon by the pastor, Dr. G. A. Scott abounded in interesting illustrations and was so plain that it was helpful to all.
The text was taken from John 7-17: "He that willeth to do His will, shall know of the doctrine."
Dr. Scott said, "Much of knowledge comes by experience. Theory is not enough, we must do if we would learn. And so in the Christian life it is not enough to know, indeed there is much we cannot know, until we begin to do. We learn by doing. By doing right we learn to know what God's will is."
There will be no service Saturday night but all day Sunday the services will be evangelistic. A free well offering for Mr. Kurtz will be received at the morning and evening services.

WASHINGTON DOWNS XENIA THREE POINTS IN FAST CONTEST

Only three points separated Xenia Central High basketball team and the Washington High five at the Washington C. H. Y. M. C. A. Friday night, but that three-point edge was the sole property and possession of Coach "Weiner" Vannorsdall's aggregation of tossers. The score was 21 to 13.

Brought pretty much to life by their miserable showing against Columbus East last week, and a stiff week's drilling insisted upon by Coach Earl Burger, the blue and white tossers showed marked improvement in their play and basket shooting. Washington like Xenia was hard hit by graduation. Baker, at guard, being the only player left from last season's five, but the Fayette County tribe had the advantage of the services of Bob Gagner, star player with Xenia last season, who is now with the Washington team, performing at center.

The three point lead that Washington held when the game ended, represented the advantage that Vannorsdall's athletes held over Captain Currie and his mates most of the game. The first half ended with Washington holding a similar lead, the score being 12 to 19, and they kept this much out in front most of the pastime. Xenia fans were pleased to see the forwards connecting with the net more consistently. LeSourd was chief point collector for Burger's charges with four field goals and two fouls. Gagner played well against his former team-mates, annexing three fielders and three fouls for his team, while Baker at guard and Brownwell at forward each got three shots from the floor. The lineup and summary:

Xenia (18) Washington (21)
Woolley L. F. Brownwell
LeSourd R. F. Schwan
Schwab C. G. Gagner
D. Currie C. L. G. Baker
Zell R. G. Clark

Substitutions: Washington—R. doecker for Sheridan. Field Goals: Woolley 3, LeSourd 4, Schwab 1, Brownwell 3, Gagner 3, Baker 3. Fouls: LeSourd 2 out of 4, Gagner 3 out of 5, Sheridan 0 out of 1. Referee: Hulmond, Ohio State.

CAN'T ALWAYS TELL WHETHER DANCE IS TO GO ON OR NOT

New York, Jan. 13.—You can't always tell whether you are going to see a show or not when a temperamental classical dancer is billed to perform. Brooklyn theatergoers concluded recently when Isadora Duncan was engaged in a clash of dispositions with her accompanist and suddenly ended the performance.

Miss Duncan and the accompanist, Max Rabinowitz, had just finished what the dancer called "a radio to Bernhardt." Before the dance she had announced that "Sarah Bernhardt is dying in Paris. I will dance her funeral march."

The plaudits of the crowd echoed loudly through the theater at the conclusion of the number. Miss Duncan took three bows and the pianist took two. Then Miss Duncan said something under her breath to Rabinowitz. He rose abruptly, left the stage and did not return.

The dancer did the next turn without the accompanist—in fact without music.

Immediately after she left the stage she also failed to show up again.

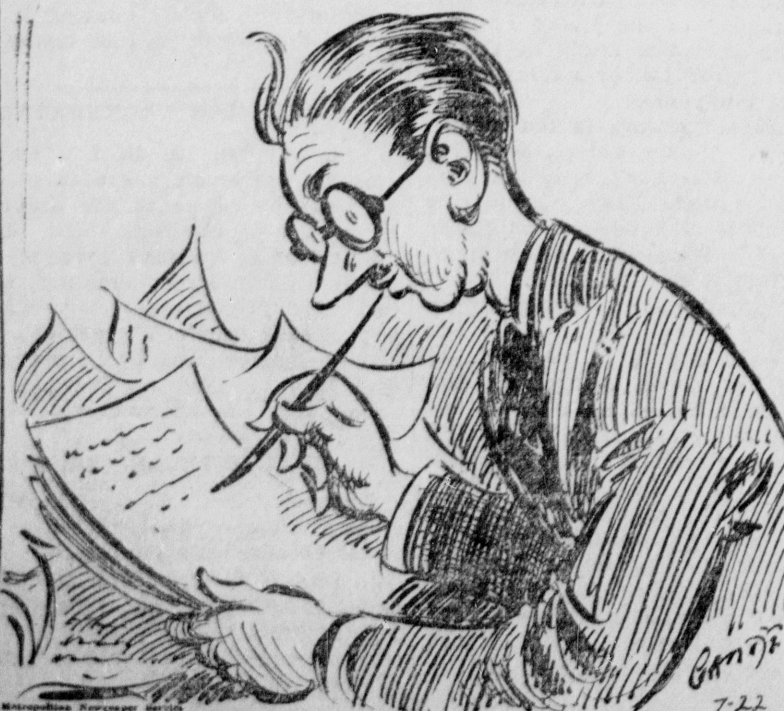

The audience wondered what it was all about, while the distracted husband of Isadora rushed through the aisles and back of the scenes searching vainly for his wife. As the last spectator filed out Miss Duncan's husband was still looking.

TICKLISH SEASON FOR ALL MUNICIPAL FLORIDA JUDGES ON

Oriando, Fla., Jan. 13.—Begins now the "Ticklish Season" for municipal judges throughout the length and breadth of Florida.

For the next four months these judges will have before them many hundreds of tourists from all sections with violating traffic ordinances of the cities of the state. These tourists, more than likely, will be guests of the city in whose court they are ordered to appear.

It is the business of the judge hearing these cases to see that his decision makes an impression on the violator and yet sends him out of the court room with a smile on his face.

Winter visitors in Florida who drive automobiles are unfamiliar with local ordinances governing operation of cars. At times it is their lot to be accosted by a traffic officer before they are enlightened on the rules, and as a result it becomes the duty of the police to explain and, if necessary, to administer a fine. To say "Five dollars and costs" to a Winter visitor and yet have the offender leave the judge in good spirits comes under the general heading of the finer arts, or diplomacy.

Many of the cities have devised a guest card, which is given out by the traffic men when automobiles with northern license plates are tagged. One side of the card usually invites the guests to register at the Chamber of Commerce, and furnishes introduction to the municipal judges from both the mayor and the secretary of the motor club.

The other is a brief summary of the traffic ordinances signed by the mayor. If a Winter visitor's automobile is tagged by an officer who places one of the guest cards in the car its owner will lose nothing by appearing as requested on the tag.

RUSSIAN ART AND LITERATURE NOW IN UNCERTAIN STATE

Paris, Jan. 13.—"Russian art and literature are at the cross roads. Nobody knows which direction they are going to take." This is the opinion of Olga Chekhova, widow of Anton Chekhova, the Russian playwright. "Naturally the revolution has released many art and literary tendencies, the existence of which were scarcely suspected a few years ago."

It was behind the scenes of the Champs Elysees Theater that I met Madame Chekhova, during the performance of Gorki's play, "The Depths." I asked this actress, as famous in Russia as her husband is known to the rest of the world, what is the secret of the Russian theater's talented cast. Although they understood not a word of the language, dozens of American tourists in the audience, between the acts were proclaiming this performance of a Russian play the most realistically acted piece they had ever seen.

"Most actors play outward," Madame Chekhova explained. "Most actors play to a greater or lesser extent to the audience. We play to each other. The audience doesn't exist for us. There is no difference or distinction between a rehearsal and a public performance. We study our roles, the characters, and study them for months before we start on the play. We study the psychology of the character we are to play until we can live the part. until we know what character so well that we know what the person would do in any situation that might arise—until we could live that character off the stage as well as on it.

"I looked at Madame Chekhova's tattered red skirt, which she wears in 'The Depths.' 'Isn't it dangerous to live a part to that extent?' I asked. 'How many times have you played in this role you have tonight?' she replied. 'Perhaps four hundred,' she replied.

"Living a part so thoroughly and so often, aren't you afraid you'll be affected by it, become sort of tattered and torn mentally and spiritually?" I asked.

Madame Chekhova's pleasant eyes twinkled. "It's art, you must remember," she replied. "I don't believe it would effect an artist. But, you see, a theater conducted on our plan cannot produce every play. The 'factory output,' as I like to describe the plays turned out in a hurry for some particular actress or stage, would almost never be suitable for the intensive work we put into a production."

"We must have works reflect real, vivid, throbbing life. Most plays written for a star cannot be said to fill this demand. The facts and truths of life are subordinated to the needs of the star or of the theater. That is why authors who create works which will live never think of particular actors while they are writing."

"But world believes that your husband wrote 'The Cherry Orchard' for you," I objected.

"He didn't even know what role I would play when he wrote 'The Cherry Orchard,'" Chekhova replied.

"It's a thoroughly entrenched tradition," I said. Madame Chekhova blushed a trifle behind her rosy make-up. She shrugged her shoulders. Evidently she doesn't dislike the tradition, even if it does conflict with her theories of the best method of writing plays which are literature.

"Perhaps," she smiled. "Have you noticed that we carry with us actual art treasures, antiques which thrill the Paris connoisseurs?" Madame Chekhova continued. "Every property used on the stage must have a significance to the actor. They must become treasured possessions, old friends, so that the actor will feel toward them as he would to his possessions off the stage. Madame Chekhova's call for the third act came, and she left her dressing room."

"Yes, she's right; but this realism in properties can go too far," grumbled one of the stage managers, as he directed me backed to the front of the theater.

"Let me show you something. I'll show you realism for a traveling company. It's what you Americans call the—takes the—I used to live in New York, you know—takes the biscuit. There's realism. We've lugged those all the way from Moscow and must cart them back again."

He pointed to ten full-sized church bells mounted in a portable belfry.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lumpy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

PLANET VENUS IS LOST THEN FOUND

New York, Jan. 13.—Venus, (the planet, not the Goddess,) disappeared early today, but before the aerial reserves could be called out, she was found by astronomers hiding behind the moon.

To the naked eye the big star looked like a button sewed on the rim of the crescent moon.

No one got excited over the occurrence but a few astronomers who knew in advance what was going to happen.

Officially it was known as the occultation of Venus.

JOHNSON MEASURE WOULD DELAY RAIL ROAD DIVIDENDS

Washington, Jan. 11.—Sen. Hiram Johnson, of California, has introduced a bill in Congress that is destined to cause a lot of commotion in railway-financial circles once Congress gets around to considering it.

Senator Johnson's bill provides, in short, that NO railroad in the United States shall be permitted to declare a dividend until it has first obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission a certificate to the effect that its equipment and service is sufficient for the needs of the people served by the road.

It is one of the most far-reaching bits of railway legislation ever proposed, for properly enforced, it would bring all railway dividends under partial control of the Government. The Government could say when and under what conditions railroads would be permitted to proclaim dividends to thousands of shareholders.

The bill is the direct outgrowth of the railway shippers' strike of last summer, which brought the whole railway system of the country to the brink of collapse. The effects of that strike are still apparent on all the railways of the country in the shape of broken-down equipment, bad-order cars and incapacitated locomotives. There are no men to make repairs, consequently no repairs, and the condition of rolling stock went steadily downward.

Then came the great seasonal movement of crops, coal and other commodities. Embargoes prevailed on some roads for months; coal began to move in great volume to a country menaced by fuel famine, with winter coming on; farmers in the West began sending their crops to seaboard and to the industrial East; shippers long denied cars began flooding the terminals with goods for shipment. All this added to the impaired condition of equipment on many roads, due to the strike, combined to create a condition of rolling stock that the country will be years in overcoming.

Shippers have complained of being unable to get cars; farmers and fruit producers of the West have seen their crops rot on the ground because of lack of facilities to move them to market.

"The grape growers of California alone suffered losses of millions of dollars because of lack of shipping facilities," said Senator Johnson, in supporting his bill. "And still railroads go on paying dividends to shareholders that should be spent in replacing worn-out equipment and adding new equipment to meet the legitimate demands of the public."

"It is intolerable that railroads should go on paying huge dividends while the producers of the West are forced to see their crops rot and their stock die because of shortage of cars."

Senator Johnson's bill is the first of the many amendments to the Esch-Cummins Transportation act of 1920 that will be proposed in Congress as a result of the 1922 strike.

There exists little possibility that any of these legislative remedies can be acted upon until next year because of the short life remaining to the sixty-seventh Congress and the uncertainty as to when the Sixty-eighth Congress will be called into session.

The bill further provides that the railroad would ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to O. K. a dividend, whereupon the commission would give 30 days' notice to the public and give shippers plenty of time to frame objections. Then a hearing would be held, if necessary, and a decision rendered in much the same manner that the commission now decides rate increases and decreases.

The bill concludes with a penalty clause providing:

Any person in anywise co-operating knowingly in the declaration of any dividend without such certificate (from the Interstate Commerce Commission), or in the payment of any dividend so unlawfully declared, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than $5,000 nor more than $25,000, or by imprisonment for not less than two years nor more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the Court.

REVISION OF TRAIN SCHEDULES AFFECTING XENIA ANNOUNCED

The most revolutionary revision of train schedules ever put in effect here by the Pennsylvania Railroad System becomes effective Sunday when four trains will be discontinued from stopping here and nine time changes will be made in the present schedule.

East bound accommodation, No. 234 which leaves Xenia at 5:50 o'clock in the evening, has been discontinued and eliminated from the schedule. Three through trains that have been stopping here will cease to stop after Sunday. They are train No. 145, west bound for St. Louis, which has been leaving Xenia at 10:25 o'clock at night, and two east bound trains from St. Louis, one No. 26, which has been arriving at 11:12 at night, and No. 6, which is due in here at 11:15 o'clock in the morning.

The changes in the time of the arrival and departures of other trains, has been to the effect of delaying these trains so that they operate from ten minutes to an hour and one-half later than the present schedule. The most radical changes are of the accommodation to Cincinnati at 8:25 a. m. which has been postponed to 9:42 o'clock in the morning and the accommodation to Columbus, which has been leaving at 8:27 a. m. and will after Sunday, depart at 9:35 o'clock.

FAST HIGH TEAMS DIVIDE TWIN BILL

East High boys and girls basketball teams divided two games with Springfield teams in a double header staged at the East High gym Friday night, the boys' team winning from the Springfield Nationals 26 to 16, while the girls lost to the Springfield sextette 12 to 9.

The East High lads romped into the lead early in the beginning of the pastime and kept this lead throughout the game. The locals were leading with the score of 18 to 9 at the end of the first half. The second period was more closely played, the teams playing evenly.

H. Taylor was leading point collector for the locals with five field goals and four from the free line, while C. Taylor annexed three shots from the floor, Warren was the best bet for the visitors with two field goals and four fouls. The lineup and summary:

UNION COMMUNITY CLUB ORGANIZES FOR YEAR

Officers for the coming year were elected at a meeting of the Community Club held Friday evening at the Union school house. Mrs. Homer Mansfield was re-elected president, Mrs. Orville Watkins was chosen vice president, Mrs. R. C. Ledbetter, secretary and Fred Wheeler as treasurer.

A program of readings and dialogues was given by the pupils and Miss Reva Spahr, of New Jasper, and Prof. Morgan, county teacher of music, added greatly to the pleasure of the evening's program with readings and musical numbers. Following the program a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

changes was received here several days ago, the revised schedule was not received until Saturday morning. The discontinuance of many trains over the division affecting other cities besides Xenia, is also being put in effect, it is said. The elimination of local trains, is due to the competition of electric traction and motor bus service, officials announce, increased transportation facilities provided by this means and by the general use of private automobiles, hurting the steam passenger service, seriously it is said.

In connection with the change, Benjamin McKeen, vice president of the southwestern region of the Pennsylvania System, has issued a statement explaining the position of the railroad with regards to the change. He says in part:

"What we are endeavoring to do is to reconstruct our purely local service upon a scale more nearly in accord with the real needs of the public, as evidenced by the actual volume of travel on these trains, by eliminating those local trains on which patronage has fallen so low as no longer to warrant their continuance. Local passenger train service in the Southwestern Region of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, is at present only being maintained at a very heavy and rapidly increasing loss. We have no expectation that the changes which are to be made will render this local service profitable or even self-sustaining. We are only endeavoring to mitigate the loss where that can be accomplished with due regard to public convenience."

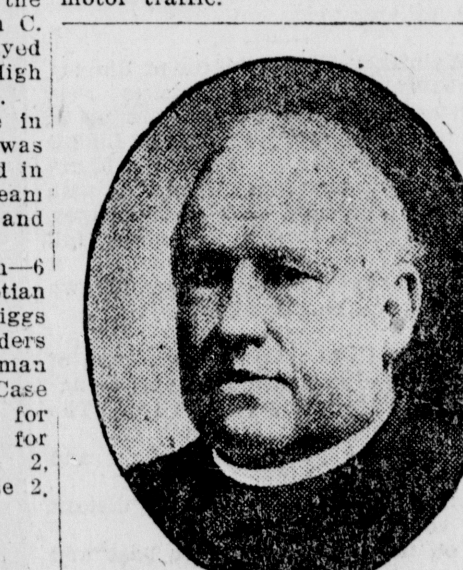

"It seems to me very important that the people in our territory should understand the nature of certain very far-reaching developments which are taking place, since they are certain to effect profoundly our system of transportation and everything dependent upon it. I have reference to the extreme competition which now exists for the shorter and moderate distance travel formerly cared for almost entirely by local steam trains and the enormous multiplication of facilities for performing such service."

"Formerly local passenger trains were well patronized. Many were self-sustaining and some were profitable. It was under those conditions that the Central West was covered with the network of steam railroad lines which now exist. About 25 years ago the development of electric interurban traction lines started and this was pushed with great rapidity, until before a decade had passed, the electric service paralleled the majority of the steam lines in our territory, particularly in Central and Southern Indiana and Ohio."

"Now still another form of competition has arisen, which, in the last few years, has grown with such amazing rapidity that few people probably have any adequate realization of its true extent. It is taking business in large volume from both of the old rivals—the local steam train and the electric lines. I refer, of course, to the immense travel in motor vehicles which is following the extremely rapid extension of our hardsurfaced and other improved highways which are paralleling both the steam railroads and the electric systems."

"Generally speaking, on the Southwestern Lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, the direct out-of-pocket cost of operating local passenger train service has risen to be about double the receipts. This means that it costs us a direct outlay of $2 cash to get $1 of gross revenue, and this out-of-pocket cost includes only such items as are a direct charge against the operation of trains such as wages of crews, maintenance of cars and locomotives, expenditures for fuel and train supplies, and makes no allowance for outlays for maintenance of tracks, buildings and terminals, nor does it include salaries of agents and operators or amounts paid for taxes, insurance, interest on bonds and other overhead expenses."

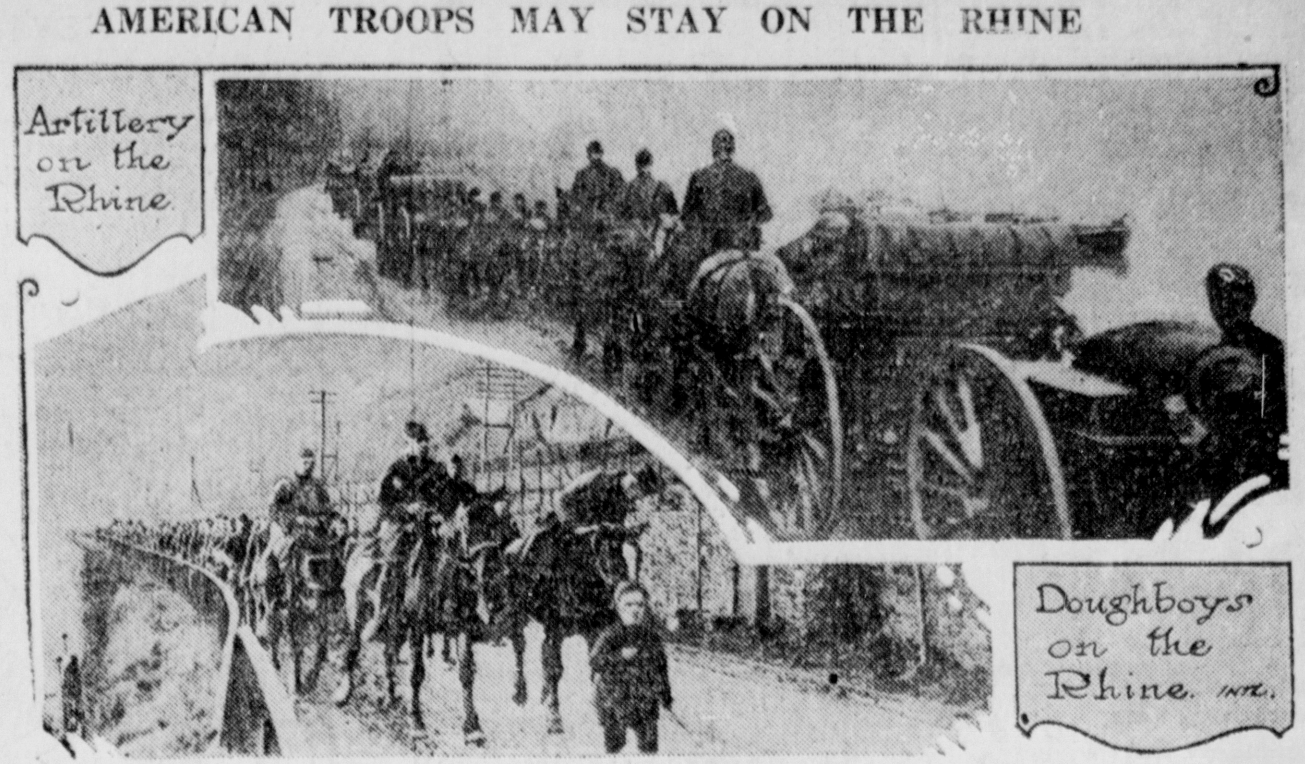

"During the past year, in connection with continued highway development and bus line extensions, the earnings of a number of our local trains have decreased heavily, in some cases as much as 40 per cent to 50 per cent; for instance on two of our lines running out of Terre Haute, Ind., the sale of local tickets has fallen over 45 per cent since the establishment of competitive motor bus routes. As the travel on the through trains remains at about the same level as a year ago, it is evident that the decreased patronage of locals directly reflects the growing motor traffic."

ENGLAND NOW HAS COUNTERPART OF THE KU KLUX KLAN

London, Jan. 11.—The Ku Klux Klan probably does not exist in England but it is said to have been the inspiration of a secret society which is reported to be flourishing in seaport towns.

England's counterpart of the Ku Klux Klan is known as "The Secret League of the Lash." It is said to have been formed by Englishmen who have taken into their own hands the punishment of those who offend the moral laws.

"The Secret League of the Lash," is most secret but it is reported that its purpose is to prevent men, not of the white race from mingling with white women, in Cardiff and other seaport towns, where men of all races come down from the sea, there has been a growing tendency on the part of women to forget the color line, and in fact there have been several scandals which have aroused the people of the country.

In London the investigations of Scotland Yard relative to alleged sale of narcotics has led to many statements which tend to show that the color line is not being strictly drawn.

The English secret society which has taken upon itself to deal with offenses against the moral laws of the country and to establish itself as an inter-racial social arbiter is patterned after the Ku Klux Klan and has for its symbol a dagger surmounted with three "K's" yet it is denied that this organization has any connection with the Ku Klux Klan.

Lodges of "The Secret League of the Lash," are said to have been established in London, Cardiff, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Liverpool, Swansea and Glasgow.

ments of said assessments and all portions thereof, together with interest thereon, shall be applied to the payment of said bonds and interest as the same shall become due, and to no other purpose whatsoever.

Section 7. That the faith, revenue and credit of the City of Xenia, Ohio, are hereby pledged for the prompt payment of both principal and interest of the bonds hereinbefore described in accordance with the laws and constitution of the State of Ohio.

Section 8. That for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to pay the interest on the foregoing issue of bonds promptly when and as the same falls due, and also to create and maintain a sinking fund sufficient to discharge the said bonds at maturity, there shall be, and is hereby levied on all the taxable property of the City of Xenia, in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax annually during the period for which said bonds are to run in an amount sufficient to provide for any deficiency in the levy, payment or collection of said assessments as the same fall due.

The said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, certified and levied and extended upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers in the same manner and at the same time that the taxes for general purposes or each of said years are certified, extended and collected. That all funds derived from said tax levies hereby required, shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund which, together with all interest collected on the same, shall be irrevocably pledged for the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due.

And that the Auditor be and hereby is directed to certify to the County Auditor a copy of this ordinance as provided by law.

Section 9. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

Passed this 11th day of January, 1923.

OUR "OBSERVER" ON THE PARIS COMMISSION URGES REVISION OF TREATY OF VERSAILLES.

Germany was voted in wilful default of her 1922 coal deliveries by the Reparations Commission at Paris Tuesday at a session featured by an address by Roland W. Boyden, in which the American representative with the commission severely criticized the workings of the Treaty of Versailles in certain respects. His strictures created much surprise and excited hardly less interest than the formal declaration of Germany's default.

The statement made by Mr. Boyden before the vote in the secret session was described by some of those who heard him as "a condemnation of the whole Treaty of Versailles and a suggestion that it should be revised as soon as possible in the interests of the economic revival of Europe."

The remarks of the American representative were currently referred to as "a sensational statement."

Neither Mr. Boyden nor Colonel James A. Logan, the other American representative, would discuss the proceedings or their part in them, feeling that the Americans, above all others, should observe the secrecy imposed by the commission.

Mr. Boyden was quoted as citing in support of his view the absurdity of declaring Germany in voluntary default on coal deliveries, when, as a matter of fact, all the deliveries in kind were entirely too great a burden upon Germany in her present condition, but that the commission, under the treaty procedure, could do nothing but recognize the default, and if he were voting he would be compelled to vote for the default.

It was a mistaken idea that it was easy to get deliveries of merchandise from Germany without affecting the financial and economic situation, the American representative is said to have pointed out. As a matter of fact, he thought that deliveries such as were being made were a serious strain on Germany's situation and one of the principal elements contributing to the weakness of Germany's position.

The vote for declaring Germany in default was three to one. Sir John Bradbury, the British member, casting the negative ballot.

The British view, it is learned, is quite similar to the American regards Germany's difficulties in meeting the coal requirements. Sir John Bradbury is reported to have said that German strikes and unavoidable transportation failures were responsible for a shortage of 750,000 tons, reducing the deficit in deliveries to 16½ per cent of the commission's demands.

GERMANY APPEALS TO "WORLD FORUM."

In a manifesto issued at Berlin Tuesday, President Ebert exhorts the inhabitants of the Ruhr Valley to remain calm "despite the continuation of French injustice and force, which constitutes a breach of the Versailles Treaty, committed against a disarmed and defenseless nation."

"The policy of force which has violated treaties and trampled the rights of humanity now threatens the key district of the German economic world," says the manifesto. "The execution of the peace treaty thus becomes an absolute impossibility, and at the same time the living conditions of the suffering German nation are disorganized."

Germany was ready to fulfill all the obligations within her power. She has now been attacked without being given a hearing. We lay the act of force before the forum of Europe and the entire world."

"Force remains force—whatever its guise." That declaration was made by Wilhelm Cuno, the Chancellor, in connection with the reported intention of France to extend her military occupation into the Ruhr region of Germany. The Chancellor added that Germany would regard the application of arbitrary force as a breach of the Versailles Peace Treaty and as "the use of might against a defenseless people."

PROSPEROUS RAILROADS VITAL TO BUSINESS.

Railroad prosperity in the United States is a fundamental necessity, for, until there are more lines, terminals, cars, locomotives and other facilities industry cannot expand, according to Elisha Lee, vice president. Eastern region, Pennsylvania Railroad System.

Mr. Lee told of this need in an address on "The Development of Transportation and Its Effects Upon Industries" before the Foremen's Club of the Philadelphia Industrial Association at the Stetson Auditorium. The speaker asserted that transportation always has paved the way for human progress.

"In our great machine of business," he said, "if any part runs too slow or too fast, the result may be to clog the whole. In every period of business activity a point is reached where the clogging of the railroads automatically checks expansion. We are in such a period now. I doubt if there is an industry of any kind that has not in recent months suffered from car shortages, embargoes or freight delays due to congestion."

"What is needed is to set the railroads free from restraint. In days gone by, when they were free, they went ahead very fast and made it possible for us to become the leading industrial nation. While that lasted we had the lowest rates, best service and highest wages of any railroads in the world."

"What is required is an aggressive demand for fair and just and helpful treatment of the railroads coming from those whose livelihood depends upon good railroad service."

During the years 1919 to 1921 the number of horseshoe manufacturing establishments was decreased from 20 to 12, due to the rapid growth of the automobile.

FALLACIES

When a woman first wakes up to the fact that she can, or should, improve her looks, one of the first things she does is to read with a credulous mind all the articles, pamphlets and ads that she can find.

Some are very cautious, they say nothing, promise nothing. But most go to the extreme. "If you'll do so and so," they put it. "You'll have glossy hair, bright eyes, long lashes, healthy teeth and an irresistible complexion practically over night."

From all this mass of writing, the reader is apt to develop a lot of fantastic ideas.

Now then—read this and see whether your common sense doesn't tell you that this is true.

You cannot restore in a few hours the skin you've taken years to ruin. You cannot grow hair on a scalp that is weak from long neglect—not all at once, that is. You cannot magically recapture your vanished youth, you cannot gain in an evening a social charm you've lacked all your life.

You can—and this is to cheer you up—slowly build up the thin hair to a thick growth. You can gradually restore the freshness and color to a skin that you have spoiled. You can go back years and years in the matter of youth, though to recapture it all may be impossible, and you can slowly develop social charm, no matter how awkward you've been in the past nor how homely you are at the moment. For this last comes from within you—your mind and heart are your own to develop, though your chin and nose may not be!

Any tiny improvement is worth trying to gain in the matter of looks—but you mustn't expect results immediately.

INCURABLE.

The janizaries of the law are after me at times, and many heavy fines I draw for speed and kindred crimes; along the dusty road I scoot, a menace dire to man and brute; the wise one, when he hears me toot, for safety wildly climbs. Sometimes the judges scold and rail, a storm of words they raise, the while they sentence me to jail, to stay there sixty days; "this term," they say, "may curb your zeal, and when again you're at the wheel you in your inmost heart may feel that safety surely pays." This speed germ is a frightful thing, when once it's in the blood; and I shall always scorch and swing through gravel, dust and mud; I am as helpless as the bloke who has to have a jolt of coke; I'll always leave a trail of smoke, and scot and skip and scud. Thus spake the speed fiend as he left the hoosegow, cold and gray; of freedom he had been bereft for many a weary day; of high resolves his heart was full; no more wild driving would he pull, and he would dodge the cop and bull who guard the public way. Next day the village stood aghast, its face all swung ajar; a loosed motorist went past as goes a shooting star; again we saw the peelers hale the speed fiend to a dungeon stale; now he will get six months in jail, and lose his motor car.

Today's Talk

INTEREST

I pity the one who has no interest in things—especially the greatest of all things, Life.

I have noticed that the employe who takes an interest in every bit of clerkship or other mode of service, is the one who later so understands the business that he is summoned higher for tasks of greater import.

Interest is the food of conquerors!

Even as the plant sucks its life from the moisture and nourishment of the earth, so does the purposeful life take its growth from the interest which it attends jealously.

I know of few unhappy BUSY lives.

It's so much better and richer to go to your bed at night with a tired—even aching—body, than to go there with a worried, dissatisfied spirit.

Get interests. One, two, three—dozens and dozens of them! And live with them, as with a group of friends.

If you have a boy, get him started in life by stimulating his interest. If you feel yourself growing stale and uninteresting to yourself, perhaps this brief Talk will help you. Get interested in new things. And keep it up!

LIQUOR FLEET DROPS ANCHOR OFF NEW YORK

Met by Swarm of Small Craft Which Race to Shore With Wet Cargo

New York, Jan. 12.—Run runners launched a concentrated attack on the Atlantic seaboard, apparently ignorant that the dry navy had just replaced its New York flagship Hansen with the Lexington, an armored chaser mounting machine guns.

A fleet of two steamers and 14 schooners dropped anchor off Sandy Hook, and immediately a swarm of 50 small craft put off from shore to meet them. Later they raced to cover with their booty, pursued by every speed boat the dry navy could muster.

Observers at Sandy Hook reported that the launch Margaret B, laden to the gunwales with whisky, was captured by a coast guard crew.

Observers ashore who professed intimate knowledge of the bootlegging trade estimated that each of the small craft, if it succeeded in running the gauntlet, would deposit a cargo of 75 to 500 cases at some cove along the Jersey or Long Island shores. The value of the liquor aboard the mother ships was roughly estimated in the millions, as each carrier was loaded to capacity.

The smugglers' latest offensive evidently caught directors of the dry navy unawares. John D. Appleby, marine prohibition director in this zone, hastily went into conference with B. C. Yellowley, state-federal enforcement agent, and a plan of campaign was whipped together.

At first it was decided to dispatch a flotilla from New York to seize the mother ships, but later this plan was changed. Instead, radio orders were flashed to dry vessels on patrol duty to watch all possible landing points and cut off the small crafts from reaching their shore bases.

Two factors were in the run runners' favor, and these the smugglers quickly seized. One was the fact that the New York dry naval squadron at present was being reorganized, with the Hansen transferred to Baltimore. The other was the fine weather following the gales that have raged off the coast.

INVASION IS NOW EXTENDING FURTHER

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The Lithuanian invasion of the international territory of Memel, on the East Prussian frontier, is extending, according to the latest report from Heydekrug, but there have been no collisions between the soldiers and the inhabitants. The invaders demand that the territory be made a part of Lithuania.

The French governor of the territory, which is under the jurisdiction of the league of nations, has but a small force at his disposal and the police of the district number only 100 men.

It is reported from Memel that in consequence of the Lithuanian invasion, the entente will send warships to reinforce the troops of occupation. Heydekrug was occupied by a force of 400 Lithuanians.

It is semi-officially announced here in Berlin that Germany does not intend sending troops to Memel, her attitude being that the allies must protect the rights and integrity of the Memel territory.

CELEBRATED FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR MARRIAGE IN THIS CITY RECENTLY

Mr. and Mrs. William Sutton, of 132 West Main street, are among the interesting couples of Greene county who have reached and celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Their anniversary was celebrated by a party of their friends and neighbors who called at their home, December 29, and arranged a most enjoyable informal social evening. The guests at the affair included:

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. John, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Foust, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John McClain, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence John, and daughter, Ada; Mr. and Mrs. Rankin Grieve, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kern, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Simes, of Dayton; Mrs. George Hall, and son, of Dayton; and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sutton, of Dayton.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutton were married in Xenia by the Rev. Mr. Marlay, December 29, 1872, and had resided on a farm near Xenia until eleven years ago, when they moved to this city, where they now reside.

Mrs. Sutton was born in Beaver-creek township, August 10, 1856, the daughter of Aaron and Elizabeth Paxton. Mr. Sutton was born in New Jasper township, February 5, 1848, the son of Philip and Sara Sutton.

Of the six children born to this union, three survive—Mrs. Edward Kern, of this city; Joseph Sutton, of Goes Station, and J. Edwin Sutton, of Dayton.

AMERICAN JAZZ IS THORN IN SIDE OF LAW'S GOVERNMENT

London, January 13.—American "jazz" threatens to become a thorn in the side of the Bonar Law Government.

British hotels are hiring American "jazz" artists for their dance orchestras. British musical unions are taking exception to this and have carried their case to Commons.

Labor members of Commons have twitted Sir Montague Barlow, Minister of Labor, and demanded that he stop issuing permits for the entrance of American dance musicians into England to engage in work here, claiming that the issuance of these permits is robbing British subjects of their right to earn a living.

While the Parliamentary battle over the merits of "jazz" runs on the American "jazzers" continue to toot their saxophones to the joy of the dancing British.

The importation by a fashionable hotel of a highly-paid American saxophone player caused the rumpus. The salary of this musician is said to have staggered British musicians, who immediately arose in their wrath and demanded that they be given the opportunity to earn similar fancy salaries, but they found all of the positions filled.

Despite the opposition of labor organizations Richmond Temple, representative of a chain of fashionable hotels, will sail for America in January to scout for new American "jazz" artists.

"There is no denying that American musicians furnish the best dance music in the world," Temple says. "We intend to have the best, and if the Government says we can't have the best, then we will close our dance floors, and let the British dancing public suffer."

MERRY GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK IN WALL STREET

New York, Jan. 13.—A merry time game of hide-and-seek cavorts daily about the corners of Wall Street's staid and solemn money temples, as strange a background for childlike pastime as one is want to find.

The actors in this queer comedy are adults. The conflicting forces—necessary fundamentals for an entertaining drama—are the curbstone merchant and the much abused police man.

It has to do with business and speed is the ulterior motive—speed or transportation on the part of the customers and speed of foot on the part of the merchant.

The street-fakir, so far as the territory that extends westward beyond the Hudson River is concerned, is almost a thing of the past. But not so in New York. Here he is still with us, accompanied with unending supplies of painless toothache gum, fountain pen-toothbrush—all in one. Gothamites in droves, they who have everything to make for a blase and tiring existence, still fall for his suave and oily words.

The fakirs' happy hunting ground is Father Knickerbocker's financial district, lower Manhattan. They would rather speak to a crowd of Wall Street habitués than to the greenest of provincials. Al. Baker, who has sold everything from paring knives to extract of malt along Nassau Street for the last ten years and has been chased by more cops than Sing Sing's oldest pickpocket, said: "The guys down here fall for it the easiest."

Asked why, Al replied: "I dunno they just do, that's all."

Enter the policeman. The New York curb merchant never bothers about procuring a license to give him legal right to reap profit from the sale of Dr. Bunkem's Famous Rattlesnake Salve. It's easier to get away with it, they say, when a fellow is fast on his feet.

They carry their wares in old suitcases and find their locations, usually in front of stately looking skyscrapers and begin their ballyhooing. It isn't long before the crowds gather. Human beings are the same on Broad street as they are in Clear Water, Mass.

"Gents, I've got here the greatest little thing on the market. The famous Empire Patented Key Ring. Holds twenty different keys and guaranteed not to bulge, rip, tear or stretch the pocket."

The words flow on, but the eyes are swifter than the tongue. They scan the horizon—east, west, north and south. A blue, brass-buttoned figure looms up from around a corner. A snatch of the suitcase and the curb merchant is dashing off and losing himself in the crowds. He finds another spot several blocks away devoid of blue and begins all over again.

"It doesn't mean anything," said Lou Mosher, another one of the "association." "The cops aren't bad sports. They only work under orders."

He was vending knitted ties—sixty-nine cents a throw. A prospective customer stood next to him examining a pseudosilk cravat to make sure he wasn't going to be beaten in the transaction. Lou looked toward Broadway and caught the gleam of brass buttons. He seized the tie from the customer's hands and made a hasty retreat, coat tails and suitcase flying in the wind. The would-be customer moved on with a chuckle. Such is the life of a business man.

Seek $8,000 For Chest Drive Which Starts In Xenia Next Wednesday

The sum of $8,000 will be sought by solicitors working in the Community Chest Campaign, when they start canvassing the city next Wednesday.

This is the amount finally set by the budget commission, of which City Manager S. O. Hale, is chairman, to supply the needs of the various charities listed for the nine months period ending next fall. The budget was reduced from $11,000 originally set, to the $8,000 amount when the period to be covered was shortened from a year to nine months.

Although the Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, has now expressed itself as unwilling to include its needs in the Community Chest campaign for next fall the shortening of the term from a year to nine months still leaves the question open and makes it possible for the Red Cross to join in the movement if its decision is changed before next fall.

The annual Community Chest campaigns are held to raise money for the Social Service League, the Sunshine Society and the Parent-Teacher Federation. This year a movement to acquire sufficient money to provide milk and dairy inspection for the city was included among the charities of the Chest Fund. The campaign is made annually in January, and the budgets fixed on the apportionment of these charities for a period of a year. The Red Cross must hold its annual roll call in October, and expressed a desire to have the Chest drive moved forward so that it could be included next fall. After this decision was arrived at and the budget committee was working to change the budget to cover the nine-months period, the Red Cross Chapter voted not to be included in the Community Chest drive next fall. The action of the chest committee in continuing the plan for a nine-months period, leaves that question still open for the Red Cross.

The Social Service League, officials of the Chest fund, point out, is the city welfare organization authorized by the charter, and is really a branch of the city government. City finances, however, do not admit of financing the organization, which is kept up by solicitation from the public. Its object includes work among the poor of a charitable nature, including medical treatment and nursing, and the maintenance of a baby clinic.

The Sunshine Society is a private organization that has been active for a number of years here, its object being to cheer up the sick, invalids and shut-ins. The Parent-Teacher Federation is undertaking work among the school children, including support of the Opportunity School and the provision of free luncheons for small youngsters.

The new provision in the Community Chest for a fund to provide health work for the city, is based on the offer of Antioch College to provide milk, dairy and water inspection for the city. The college maintains a department of health equipped to take care of this work and has offered four different systems of supervision to the city.

The most complete plan offered, would cost the city $2,500 a year which has been appropriated, by agreement with Dean Philip C. Nash, of Antioch, at $1,800 for the nine months period. This plan offers tests of five water samples weekly; tests of 12 milk samples weekly; one inspection of all milk depots weekly and one inspection per month of 50 producers of milk. A reduction in price is offered for only two water samples weekly, which is all required by the State Department of Health and with which plan the city is now complying.

If the full quota of $8,000 set to cover the nine-months period by the budget committee is obtained, all of these movements will be assigned the amounts asked for. If the full amount is not attained, the total amount will be pro-rated among the various organizations. In that case, it would be necessary for the city to accept one of the cheaper plans offered by the College to provide this inspection.

The Community Chest Campaign is being backed by the Chamber of Commerce, and Karl B. Bloom, president of that organization is a member of the budget or executive committee. Miss Janice Owens, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is now preparing the list of solicitors, who will be assigned different sections of the city to canvass.

Paris, Jan. 13.—France is running over with ready money, declares an investigator, Paul Bourguignon, writing in Le Petit Bleu, "France is glutted with available cash, and never within the span of our memory which extends back far enough, have the capitalists and the savings accounts of the nation shown such good will in offering their funds to the nation or to great industries, presenting good security and advantageous interest rates."

Plead Poverty

This is a much different story than one usually hears in Paris. The French Government offers 8 per cent, short-term loans, and to secure purchasers has created a lottery system by which bondholders may have a chance to win millions of francs in prizes. When the question of the French debts or of German reparations arises French writers are accustomed to point out that the nation is on the verge of bankruptcy. It must not be forgotten that during the coming year France will spend nearly four billion francs more than she can possibly hope to receive in all her revenue schemes.

Bourguignon backs up his statements with statistics.

"The Paris subway, the Metropolitan, had not yet publicly opened the subscriptions for 174,000,000 francs' worth of bonds, when the banks announced that all the bonds had been placed in advance. The Credit Foncier planned to place a loan of 600,000,000 francs. The loan was entirely subscribed for before the terms of the issue had been published."

Cites Figures

"The Minister of the Treasury, Monsieur de Lasteyrie, required four billion francs and issued a public loan. More than eight billions were subscribed. Doesn't this show the extreme abundance of available money and the good will of the saving public? The Bourse, despite the uncertain political outlook, has shown a steady upward movement of securities which shows the activity of idle capital seeking employment."

The writer concludes by urging the Government to take advantage of this ready cash to rebuild the devastated areas and to float gigantic water power schemes which will make France nearly independent of foreign coal-exporting countries.

London, Jan. 13.—When it is impossible to observe the faces at figures of one's colleagues in the House of Commons, the next best thing is to study their voices and accents. It has been perforce a habit of mine for some years to regard my fellow men in this manner; and Parliament, where events are ruled by discussion, gives me endless opportunities.

Never before has the Glasgow accent so dominated debate in the national assembly. The dialect made famous in London and elsewhere in England by Sir Harry Lauder is to be heard constantly in the House and the lobbies, and it is probably idiom for me to pursue any longer my lifelong crusade against the Sassenach view that this is the authentic Scottish accent. In the north of Scotland we do not like the Lauder tongue, but the Socialists of Clydeside and neither to be ignored nor denied in Westminster. And we poor Northerners must give in to our own fate. From henceforth for evermore the voice of Glasgow will be accepted as the voice of Scotland; the more the pity, but there it is!

"Wonderful Tongue"
A wonderful tongue it is, capable of infinite modifications. In its lower keys it can be used as the most appealing and plaintive of instruments. When passion commands, it can come as raucous as a klaxon horn and about as menacing. There is Mr. Kirkwood, I can hardly believe that he loves the sound of his own voice; but it is certain he uses it with much frequency, mostly to terrort opponents.

He has the full equipment of a street-corner orator. No gentleness or beauty is permitted to qualify the crudeness of his opinions. "Gleece," the most aggressive pitch in his vocabulary, is in the stock-in-trade. The most reasonable argument must sound revolutions when conveyed by such a medium. And then there is Mr. Shinwell, who does himself less than justice on the frequent occasions when he adopts the sneering tone. He makes blood run cold then. It was thus that the serpent spoke to the woman. Was a fool she must have been to listen to him!

But, of course, the Labor Party not all from Clydeside. The least Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, is probably much a countryman of my own. He speaks good Scots—which is, of course, excellent English. "More over," as he would say himself, has been endowed by nature with

COUNTY MINISTERS TO ATTEND MEETING AT STATE CAPITAL

Xenia and Greene County ministers are planning to attend the fourth annual State Pastors' Convention, to be held in Columbus, January 22 to 24.

Special efforts to obtain an outstanding group of speakers for the convention, have resulted in the formulation of a program filled with inspiration and with practical advice and assistance for pastors, as they set out upon their year's activities, according to advance notices.

The official directing head of Protestant endeavor in the United States, Dr. Robert E. Speer, President of the Federal Council of Churches, will bring the message of that body to the Ohio ministers in two addresses.

Representatives of interdenominational movements in the field of international relations, race problems, industrial relations, public morals, and other matters of common interest to all churches will present authoritative information on these subjects.

Recognized leaders of wide practical experience in such matters, as evangelism, religious education, local church co-operation, and other branches of church activity, will place suggestions, based on actual experience before the ministers.

Cedarville College Notes

The students of Cedarville College have resumed their usual duties after a happy vacation. Besides pursuing their studies they are busy preparing for mid-year exams and registering for the following semester. It is hoped that the enrollment of the student body for the second semester will exceed that of the first.

Two fast basketball games were played in the college gym on Friday evening, January 5. The first game was won by the Cedarville boys from the Boring-Yanks of Xenia by a narrow margin, while the college girls won over the Wilmington College girls in a well balanced contest.

A number of the college students attended a party on the evening of January 2, given by Miss Florence Smith.

Miss Ellen Tarbox entertained some of the college students Saturday evening, January 6.

The student body and the faculty of Cedarville College were glad to welcome Miss Winifred Stuckey back to school at the close of the holidays. Miss Stuckey has nearly recovered from a recent operation.

Miss Wilma Amott, who was called to the bedside of her mother some weeks before school closed for vacation, has returned to Cedarville to resume her studies.

Mr. Melvin McMillan, of the furniture and undertaking firm of J. H. McMillan and son, of Cedarville, is spending the week at the furniture market at Grand Rapids, and Chicago.

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

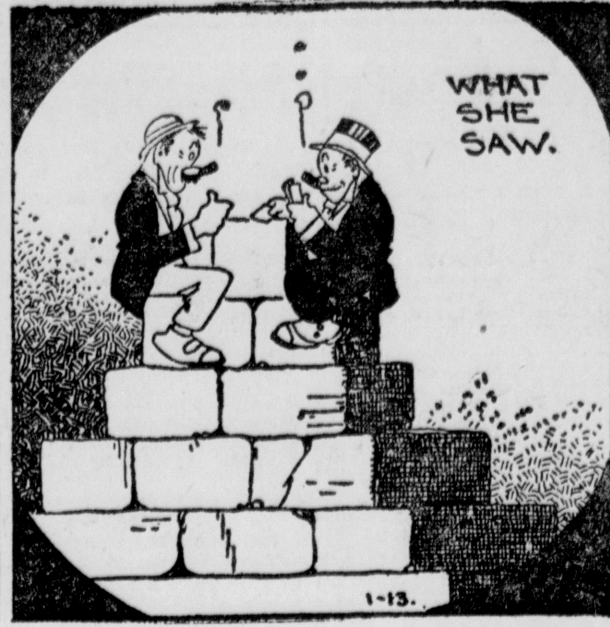

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

DEBS' INVITATION SPLITS CLUB UNITY

Cleveland, Jan. 12.—Cleveland City Club is rent from center to circumference today by the recent action of the directors in voting to invite Eugene V. Debs, noted socialist leader to address the organization. Up to this morning eight members of the organization, representing the more conservative element, have voiced their protests by resignations while a petition is being circulated by others asking the directors to reconsider their action.

Debs, pardoned by President Harding after having been convicted of violation of the espionage act during the war by inciting men to resist the draft in a speech at Canton, some time ago, promised Peter Witt, a so-called "radical" member of the club, to accept an invitation to speak.

The club in its "creed" declares that it maintains an "open forum" where it will hear men of all views.

WANT CAPITAL OF ENGLAND CHANGED

London, Jan. 13.—The English labor members of Parliament have another grouch. They complain that the Houses of Parliament are too far from the rest of England, Scotland and Wales and should be more centralized and are telling their constituents about it in no uncertain terms.

Mr. Maxton, of Glasgow, makes the most original proposition. "I think," he told his constituents, "that the Houses of Parliament should be put in the middle of Yorkshire."

"It is a bad policy to have the House of Commons in London, which is not a representative town. The people round about Westminster are not representative of the people of Great Britain. There are more wealthy people in that district than any other."

Chapters From A Woman's Life

BY JANE PHELPS

CHAPTER 77

Walter had been gone but a few moments when a nurse beckoned me. I followed her into a room where Helen lay pale as the pillow upon which her head rested, but conscious.

"I'm done for, Mrs. Page," she whispered as I bent over her. "Don't let Walter feel badly. I—"

"Oh, no, you'll get well!" I interrupted. "It was very brave of you."

"No, not brave. You see I love Walter. You mustn't tell his wife," she was wandering now, did not know me.

"He never loved me, was just kind like he is to everyone, and full of nonsense. But I—I love him—and I'm glad—I'd rather die than—"

"No, Helen, you aren't going to die!" I again interrupted her. For a time she was silent then began to talk again, disjointedly, weakly, going over times she had been with Walter—saying I hated her because she loved him and so on.

"Mrs. Page doesn't hate you, Helen," I said distinctly. "She told me she didn't. I bent over, and with streaming eyes, kissed her.

"That's nice—don't ever tell—her—I loved Walter. I was going to steal—Jackie—but I wasn't—quite bad enough. I couldn't—hurt—her so."

While she talked a change had come over her face. I opened the door and motioned the nurse. She looked at her a moment, then called the doctor.

"Internal bleeding," he whispered. "She's almost gone."

"Don't tell—her—I loved—" Helen whispered. Then when I could see through my tears, the nurse was drawing the sheet up. Helen Ralstrom had died.

While I sat in the waiting room until Walter should come my thoughts raced.

She had died for him, had thrown herself in front of him to save him. Should I tell him of her dying confession of love?

For what seemed hours, but was in reality but about fifteen minutes I pondered that question. There was nothing to be gained by telling him, his remorse would be great enough as it was.

He knew she had been killed when trying to save him. If he knew she had done it deliberately, because she loved him, his remorse would be greater, the effect upon him one I dared not face. With his disposition, there was no telling what he might do.

So before he appeared I determined to tell him nothing. Not even about Jackie. She had said he never loved her—perhaps that softened my feeling toward her.

But I no longer hated her, and had she lived even after the confession I felt I could never have hated her again. She had wanted to take Walter from me, but she also had saved him for me.

"She's gone, Walter—15 minutes ago," I told him gently. "Shall we see her, then we must make all the arrangements necessary."

Without a word he followed me into the room where she lay. As he looked at her, beautiful in death, his tears fell fast.

"It was so unnecessary," he said softly. "If she had just kept still and let them take what they wanted it wouldn't have happened."

He had given me my cue. "She was always impulsive," I said. "Did things, then thought afterward. The sight of the revolver frightened her."

"Poor girl, if I hadn't offered to take her home she would have gone safely in the subway. I never shall forgive myself—never!"

"Don't blame yourself for what could not be helped," I said.

And I couldn't help but feel that I was right in keeping her confession to myself; that she had been right in saying Walter did not love her. Walter's grief was real, very real; yet it was not the grief of a man who has lost a woman he loves.

We made all arrangements possible that night, then went home. In the morning we would take care of all expenses of the grieving aunt, who arrived at the hospital before we left.

"She was all I had—a headstrong girl—but not bad at heart," the aunt said sobbing.

I told her how terribly we felt that it had happened when with us.

"Don't blame yourselves," she said. "but get those hold-up men if you can and make them pay for murdering her."

"If it is humanly possible we will get them," Walter assured her, but we never did although the police were at once told of the affair.

Walter also hired a private detective. It was just one of the many murders that go unpunished.

Hints to the Housewife

Dear Mrs. Thompson: About two weeks ago one of my girl friends called up and asked me to have a date with a boy she knew. We went car riding and when he brought me home he asked me to write. I didn't promise whether I would write or not.

He didn't ask for another date and I didn't ask him to come again, as I supposed it was his place to ask me.

Since then my girl friend has seen him and she said he wanted her to ask me for another date with him. She told him that he would have to ask me. Then he said he would call me, but he hasn't called yet. Do you think I ought to write to him?

Do you think the reason he does not ask for another date is because I didn't invite him to come again? If that is the reason, do you think I ought to write to him asking him to come to see me sometime, or should I let him go?

I am not in love, as some girls say, but I would hate to have him feel that I didn't like his company at all, because I did.

SUSIE ANN.

I would advise you to let the boy go. When he wants to see you again he will ask. To write to him would give him a chance to think you were running after him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please print a list of things to eat which will not make one fat?

IGNORANCE.

First of all, do not drink liquids with your meals. Besides, avoid potatoes and other starchy foods, fat meats, milk and eggs. Fruits, except bananas, will not increase your weight. Lean meat which is thoroughly cooked is all right.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl eighteen years of age and have a boy friend twenty-two. He is a gentleman everywhere and so my parents do not object in my going with him.

I have known this boy two months. Now I have met another boy at my aunt's home who has asked to take me places. He has been with me alone two times. He asked me to kiss him good-night and I refused. Since then I have felt that I ought not to pay any more attention to him, although I would like him for a friend.

It happened one evening that the boy twenty-two years of age called at my home unexpectedly and saw the other boy with me. The same evening he left very early and did not talk to me as much as usual, which meant he was broken-hearted.

I like the boy of twenty-two and would be very glad to regain his friendship. Will you tell me what I should do, for he will not come to see me anymore? F. S. I.

The young man seems rather free with his request for a kiss. I think you did the right thing in refusing him, and I would advise you to continue to do so, unless your friendship ends in something deeper. It is not an unusual thing for a young man to ask to kiss a girl. If, therefore, you have no further criticism and would like to keep him as a friend, I think it would be all right for you to do so.

You cannot force the other young man to come to see you. Be friendly to him when you meet and he may ask to come back of his own accord.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please advise me regarding the removal of superfluous hair. Would you recommend the electric needle or is there any other permanent way? INQUIRER.

There is no permanent way except the electric needle, and even that cannot be guaranteed to be permanent.

TESTED RECIPES.

Apple, Date and Celery Salad.—Pare one large, choice apple, quarter, core and cut into small pieces and squeeze over these the juice of half a lemon. Cut five choice stalks of celery in small pieces. Pour boiling water over half a pound of dates. Stir the water through them, skim to an earthen disk and dry in the oven. When cold cut each into four or five lengthwise pieces. Mix the apple, celery and dates together and add a generous half cup of mayonnaise dressing and stir again. Garnish with celery leaves if desired.

Cream Cookies.—One cup of sugar, one cup shortening (half butter and half lard), two eggs, one cup sour cream, one teaspoon of soda dissolved in cream, pinch of salt. Flavor to taste. Mix in order given and add two teaspoons of baking powder and enough flour to make a stiff dough. Bake in a moderate oven.

HOLIDAY DISHES.

Pigeon Pie.—Six pigeons dressed and split, six or eight tablespoons flour, salt and pepper, pork or bacon fat, bay leaf, one and one-half cups dried celery, one can peas, one cup boiling water, one pint milk (scalded), six tablespoons butter, six tablespoons flour, biscuit dough.

Dredge pigeons with flour, sprinkle with salt and pepper and saute in hot pork fat. Place in a saucepan or casserole. Add bay leaf, celery, boiling water and simmer slowly until tender—about one and one-half hours. Add two and one-half to three teaspoons salt.

Thicken with butter and flour rubbed together, add peas and scalded milk. Pour into a baking dish, cover with short biscuit dough rolled about one-quarter inch thick. Bake in a hot oven until brown.

Squab en Casserole.—Three large squabs, one cup chicken stock, one cup small potato balls, one can asparagus tips or one bunch asparagus, twelve small white onions, three to four tablespoons of melted butter or substitute.

Dress, clean and truss the squabs and place in a large casserole, brush with melted butter and bake in a hot oven ten minutes. Add stock, cover and cook until squabs are tender. Add potato balls and onions boiled and sprinkled with melted butter.

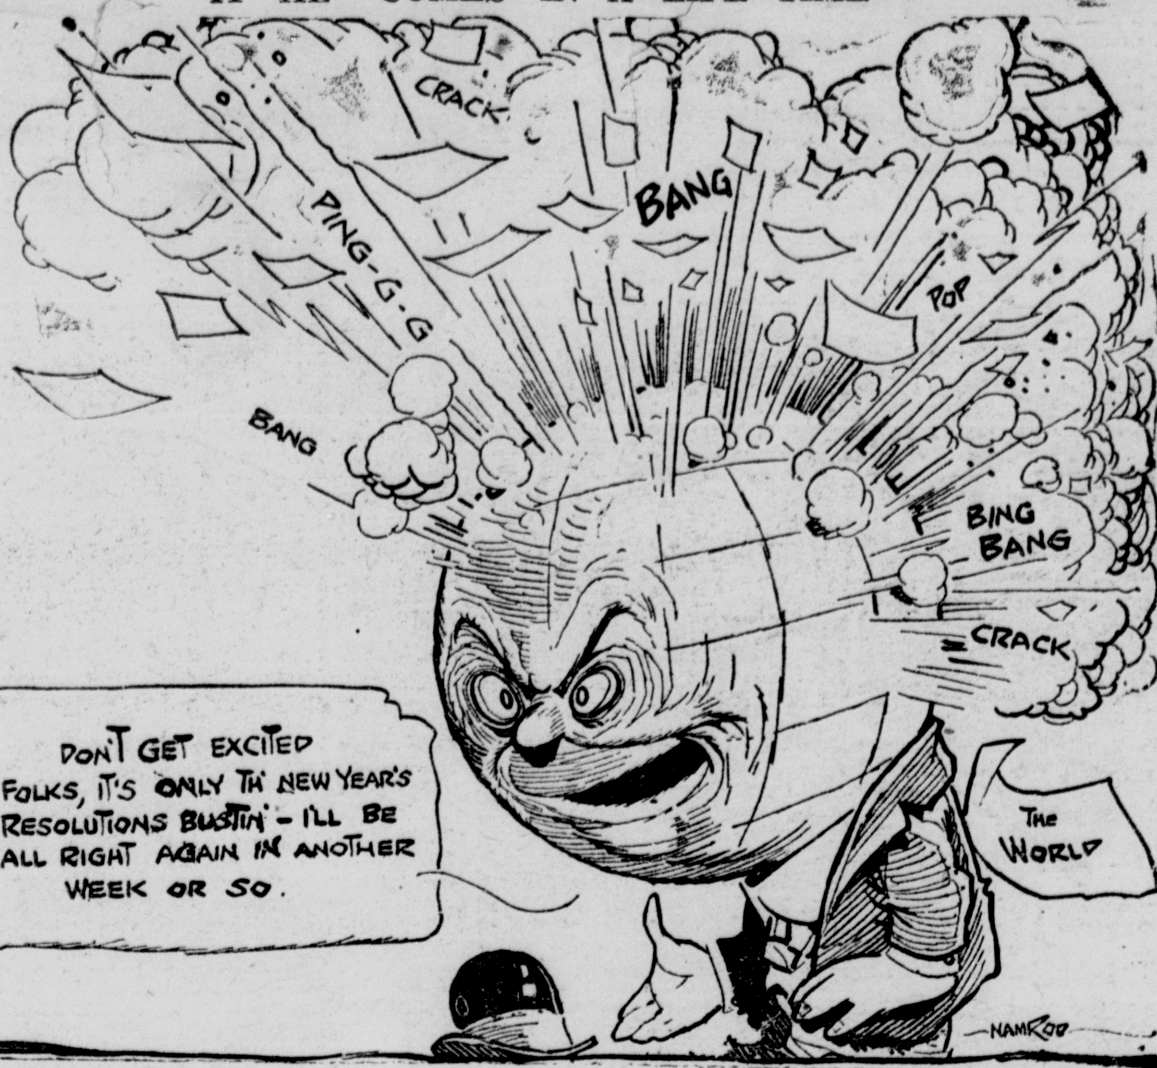

MEAT SAUCES.

Olive Sauce.—Ten olives, two cups brown gravy. Remove stones from olives, leaving meat as whole as possible. Cover with boiling water and boil fifteen minutes. Drain and mix with gravy.

IT ALL COMES IN A LIFE TIME

CRIME WORLD

SIR BASIL THOMSON, former head of Scotland Yard detectives, says that nine out of ten criminals "go bad" before reaching 21. Thomson advances the new theory that the cause of the majority of crimes is the love of acting—the desire for applause—so common among children.

"Grown older, the criminal plays to a gallery of fellow-criminals. It is untrue that the criminal is born, not made. It's the sporting chance that makes crime—the same thing that makes the railway traveler willing to ride on a train—he is sure that he will not be the one out of a million people to be killed in an accident."

No criminal, of course, when he commits his crime believes that he will be caught. He realizes that the odds are heavily against him, and increasingly so as civilization knits the world closer together. But he hypnotizes himself into the belief that the ones to be caught will be others, not including himself.

The presence of this daring and gambling element in crime may give the law-breaker a temporary thrill. He is too much of a fool to realize that all gamblers, from crap shooters and stock market speculators to criminals, eventually lose, it's only a matter of time. This is proved by the laws of mathematics, dealing with "probabilities."

As for the cause of crime, Sir Basil Thomson traces it to the average person's instinctive love of play-acting and applause. Obviously, the less crime is glorified in fiction, the less the child-mind will hoax itself with a belief that crime leads to applause and "fame." The applause, if any, comes only from a few who are not worth while. Otherwise, outside of detective stories, applause is reserved until the criminal is captured and punished.

LIVING LONG

HALF of us live to be 60, and nearly a fourth of us reach 75. This cheerful state of affairs is announced by Dr. Louis I. Dublin, chief statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

"The average person at 50," says Dr. Dublin, "may now hope to live to the age of 71—or, as we put it, the average length of life remaining to each one of the survivors at age 50 is 21 more years. Even at 70 there is more than nine years of expectation and so on in a diminishing degree to the end."

The average baby born in America in 1901 could be expected to live 49 years 3 months.

The average baby born in 1923 should reach 65, thanks to great strides by medical science, especially in saving the lives of children during babyhood and early childhood.

As a matter of fact, children born in 1923 may, for all we know, live to an average age of 100, 150 or more. Startling discoveries, in the way of prolonging human life, may be made before many more years, by the use of radium or artificially stimulating the endocrine glands of the body—thyroid, adrenals, etc.

The great strides that have been made in the last 20 years, in prolonging the average duration of human life, have been mostly by reducing infantile death rate. Science is turning its attention to similar service for mature people. Much is possible. And considerable is probable.

LET'S stand upon the corner of most any town at all, and watch the march of people going by. Let's view the little youngsters and the grown-ups, short and tall—just give them all the overlooking eye.

There's Mrs. Anybody with a coat that's made of mink; her husband's by her side in brand new gloves. No doubt the Mrs. wonders what the neighbors all will think, for envy is a thing a woman loves.

And little Willie Jones is out and dressed up spic and span. The shoes he wears are patterned after dad. He hopes that folk who see him will remark that he's a man. You know how things like that make youngsters glad.

And sister Susie's on parade in fancy dress of blue. She has some brilliant ribbons in her hair. She struts around where folks may see—she has naught else to do. She simply feels the spirit in the air.

What spirit? you are asking. Well, it comes but once a year. The aftermath of rushing Yuletide trade. When fancy frock and new things on the sidewalks will appear as folks take Christmas presents on parade.

500 NEIGHBORS FETE OHIO'S "CORN KING"

Nearly 500 Licking County farm people gathered last week at the Croton Centralized School for a community supper in honor of their neighbor, William H. Gilmore, the man, who last summer broke all known records by raising 134 bushels of corn to the acre, on 10 acres.

But they did not hear the whole story. Mr. Gilmore, was overcome by the demonstration accorded him, and had to stop halfway through. "I am no speaker," he said, mopping his face with his handkerchief. "This place seems hotter to me than any cornfield I was ever in." Being assured that somebody else would do the talking for the rest of the evening, he recovered rapidly and took his place at the head of the board for the "community spread" of 500 places prepared by the neighbors in his honor.

WHEN FARMING PAYS

An Analysis of the Economic, Political and Social Conditions Which Make Farming Profitable

Chicago is the world's greatest livestock market.

During this year the Chicago market received and sold about 17,000,000 animals for half a billion dollars, according to statistics appearing in the Breeders' Gazette. These figures represent a gain over 1921, both in number and value. In 1919 Chicago disposed of 18,215,000 animals at higher prices than prevail today. Since the Union Stockyards were opened, a grand total of 657,000,000 animals have been sold within its gates for the vast sum of $15,000,000,000.00. More than 100 established commission houses sell livestock regularly on the Chicago market for patrons living in 22 states.

These figures describe the outlet for one of the great branches of agricultural production, and are of general interest to farmers because nearly every farmer in this part of the country is at one time or another a livestock raiser. The proportions which the slaughter of animal life has attained in the effort to supply an ever-growing population with food are sobering. Comfort lies in the development which has made this slaughter systematic and as merciful as possible.

If the firms of Armour and Co. and Morris and Co. were considered "trusts" or "incubuses," how will the more bolshevistically inclined regard the proposed consolidation of these two great factors in the packing business.

Wholesale grocers take the consolidation as a covert admission of failure in direct selling to retailer as against the plan of marketing goods through the wholesale grocer. M. L. Toulme, secretary of the National Wholesale Grocers Association, suggests that "direct selling to retailers of competitively manufactured, non-perishable food products is impractical from a competitive standpoint." The costs of going around the wholesale grocer are too high.

If the big packers have not already been able to make their system of distribution profitable through the economies of large-scale operation, it is difficult to see how they can hope to make it so by further consolidation and enlargement. The consolidation might conceivably simplify problems of finance and management however and thus result in larger profits.

The distribution costs of the packers are more burdensome than before the war and they find the competition of local packers more onerous.
